The Editor Hears

That the woods along the shores of the lakes and rivers are filled with birds that are usually found further from the haunts of men. The drought has dried up the little streams where they bathe and drink, so they have sought new feeding grounds.

That visitors from the Thousand Islands find novelties and bargains in the Kingston shops and go home laden with souvenirs of their trip to the oldest city in Ontario.

That the first woman lawyer in Scotland was introduced to the Scottish court a few days ago when Miss Margaret Henderson Kidd, daughter of James Kidd, former member of parliament, for Linlithgowshire, was admitted a member of the faculty of advocates.

That some visitors at summer cottages say that the only drawback to camp life is the frequency with which canned meat and vegetables appear at the table.

That the pathetic stories of drowning accidents among the young people who spend the summer on the shores of our lakes and rivers should be a warning to our boys and girls. There is nothing brave or smart in taking risks for fun or because others are doing it, and it is noticeable that the most experienced swimmers and sailors are the most cautious. They know the danger and avoid it.

That the Kingston merchants say they have not sold an umbrella for weeks and the dry weather has so preserved the straw hats, that they

CONTRIBUTED CANNING RECIPES. Reader friends have been kind enough to mail me the following canning recipes to publish so that other women might enjoy them. "Pineapple-Apricot Jam; Three large or four small pineapples, two pounds of dried apricots, granulated sugar. Soak the dried apricots overnight, then put them through a food chopper. Also put the pared pineapples through the food chopper. Measure the mixture and to ten cups of it add seven cups of sugar. Boil this combination of chopped fruit and sugar for 20 minutes and turn into hot, sterilized jelly glasses. When cold, cover with melted paraffine wax.—Mrs. E. K."

"Canning Okra by the Open-Kettle Method: Prepare the okra to cook for canning, and put it in an enamelware or porcelain-lined preserving kettle; pour over it one-half cup of vinegar and enough boiling water to cover; add two tablespoons of salt and cook for 15 minutes. Then pack it into hot, sterilized glass jars, adjust new rubber and glass top, and completely seal at once. (Green Beans will keep excellently if canned in exactly the same way). Here is another good okra recipe: "Okra-Tomato Mixture Canned by Open-Kettle Method: Combine one gallon of ripe tomatoes with 15 degrees below zero, to drive over frozen lakes to reach an applicant in a remote region in Northern Ontario. After a drive of ten miles the attempt had to be abandoned when the horses were buried in snow over their backs, and the investigator had to wade back over a mile to get help to get them out.

Later in the year the same trip was made by this investigator by leaving Sudbury on an early morning train on which she travelled thirty miles when she was met by a team with which she drove seven miles to a river. Here she was met by her guide, a Finnish girl, of eight or ten years of age. They rowed one mile down the river to the first lake, where there followed a three-mile paddle, bringing them to a five-mile trail through the bush to the shores of another lake. Another three-mile paddle along the shore brought them to the spotless home

TIED, NERVOUS MOTHERS are the direct cause of much unhappiness in our homes; their condition irritates and wears upon the husband and often ruins a child's disposition. This condition of the mother is often due to some weakness which makes her entirely unfit to perform her household duties and bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves. Every woman who finds herself in this condition should remember that statistics prove that 98 out of every 100 women who suffer from female ills are helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and lose no time in giving it a fair trial.

STRENUOUS WORK IN NORTH. Toronto Star. Some of the difficulties which the mother's allowance investigators encounter in their work are described in the annual report of the commission which has just been printed. The handicap of big territories and bad weathered conditions have often to be contended with, and the experiences recited are a tribute to the indefatigable manner in which those entrusted with investigation carry out their duties.

One investigator, it is stated, apologizes for delay in forwarding a report, stating the visit to the applicant's home involved a drive of fifty-four miles and a walk of six, while another reports that she has driven one hundred and twenty miles over bad roads on Saturday, forty on Sunday, forty-five the following Thursday and eighty on Friday.

A record of one day's work includes three train journeys and two driving trips of over thirty miles, with two upsets in the snow, necessitating at one spot to walk to the nearest farm for a shovel with which to dig out the horse.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 16. The conflicting positions of the major planets ruling on this day point to contradictory situations. While affairs may be lively and quite important in development, opening up several channels of opportunity both in business and other affairs, yet there may be certain setbacks or obstacles to surmount. The main difficulty may be due to the unsatisfactory condition of the health or that of the household, enforcing postponements or creating anxiety. Those in the employment of others may be favored.
