SCHOOLS SHOULD TEACH VALUE OF TIME AND MONEY

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

The youth of this nation stands today at the threshold of another school year. How much will these ensuing months of study add to a practical understanding by the girls and boys of America with regard to the proper earning, saving, spending and investing of money?

These are serious questions. They are ones parents particularly should be asking. If there is any value in thrift, if the efficient use of time and money means anything at all in individual progress and happiness, then the foundation for such advantages must be laid largely in the formative years of youth.

Unmistakably this important element of educational equipment has been neglected in our American schools because of an already overcrowded curriculum. Our boys and girls have only been told in a vague, incomplete and unconvincing manner that there is value in thrift. They have been told but not sold on all that thrift means in the struggle for success.

But, with the opening of the current school year, definite steps toward thrift teachings in the schools have been taken. The great National Education Association, by far the most powerful and effective organization of educators in the world, has after eight years of patient research by the Association's National Committee on Thrift Education, mapped out a concrete course by which there will be given a thrift application to many of the fundamental branches.

We cannot over-estimate the importance of the step. All who are interested in the advancement of education along more practical lines will acclaim it an epochal accomplishment. Parents who appreciate what an understanding of thrift will mean in the welfare of their children should rejoice at the work now being done. In every city, town and rural district of our country this great American plan of thrift training for our boys and girls should be given the most enthusiastic welcome.

What the World Is Doing

AS SEEN BY POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE

Human Hair Made Into Cloth Resists Heavy Pressure

Tons of human hair are being turned into cloth by a southern factory, to supply the demand of cotton-seed oil mills of that section for a fabric that will withstand, for a time at least, a pressure of 4,000 to 4,500 pounds a square inch. Only that made from hair is strong enough. Formerly it was woven from camel's hair, but the price of that product went to such high levels as to prohibit its use. After a series of tests, a method was devised for weaving human hair in specially constructed machines. The search for a sufficient supply to keep the factory going ended in China, where buyers found a veritable army of coolies ready to sacrifice their quebra for American money. Bound in huge bales, the hair arrives at the factory ready for weaving, having already been inspected and classified on the way over from the Orient. Combed and carded, it is twisted into threads and fed into the looms, where it is woven into rolls of cloth 1/4 inch thick, the bolt weighing 400 pounds.

Mule, as Caddie, Carries Bags of Golfers

Because of lack of caddies, a mule is being used on one golf course in the South to carry the bags of the players. One of the mule's advantages over the human caddie is the fact that he can carry as many as 400 lbs. as can be strapped on his back. Then, too, he works without tips or pay.

Weighting 20% carbon, a diamond of a rich brassy shade, has been found in an African mine. It is said to be the largest of its kind and is valued at $2,000 dollars.

Auto Lights Under Fenders Remove Strong Glare

By having all of its rays strike directly on the road ahead, an automobile lamp attached by a single bolt to the under side of the front fender inside the wheel, does away with blinding glare of ordinary high-powered headlights that frequently annoy those driving at night. Its shaft of light, thrown for 300 feet, is low enough to avoid the eyes of approaching motorists and cyclists, and clearly shows the road from both directions, preventing many accidents and making dimming unnecessary. A bracket allows the level of the light to be raised or lowered with ease.

Water Bike Aids Life Guards in Saving Drowning Persons

To aid life guards in rescue work, a floating frame supported in the water between two air tanks, enables them to reach danger points quickly. Half submerged, the rider drives a propeller by working pedals with his feet, traveling at greater speed than swimming would permit. The body of the victim may be easily thrown across the front of the tanks and carried to shore.

Tag Fish for Identification

A practical and comprehensive plan has been suggested by the Bureau of Fisheries, to help in studying the habits of various fish such as salmon, codfish, pollock and haddock. A device similar to a bachelorette button of aluminum is riveted into the fish's tail. With this system the oceanic migration of fish, their rate of growth in various localities, and age can be determined. The bureau pays 25 cents each for tags sent in if accompanied by place and date of capture, length, weight and sex of fish, and how marked.

Sick Cured With War Gases

Deadly gases developed during the war are now being used to cure disease. Grip, colds, and the "flu" are quickly checked by chlorine gas, say army chemists. Mustard gas is being used to combat tuberculosis, while phosgene and other diseases, are being treated with some success with "lewisite," a gas of arsenic and acetylene, invented for use by American troops.

Mixing Feed for Hogs

The novel method of slopping hogs shown in the drawing has been found a great time and labor saver on an Iowa farm. The iron tank shown in the foreground is placed at one end of the concrete watering trough, and can be filled with water from the pipe that supplies the trough. The tankage, shorts, or other ground feeds are mixed in the tank and enough water run in to make a thin slop. Then the valve indicated by the arrow is opened, and one of the troughs filled, whereupon the valve is closed again, the pipe swung over to the other trough, and this one filled. The valve

Shipping Delayed

The fog that set in suddenly on Wednesday night caused a large number of vessels bound in both directions to lie at anchor until the morning. They were along the coast for miles at day-break, and fortunately the fog lifted and allowed them to proceed. It is stated that grain vessels were tied up this side of the Lachine canal during the week for a distance of seven miles, awaiting the repairs to the gates, and after the repairs were made they were forced to wait their turn. This season shipping men state conditions are worse than last year.
