Dull and Disobedient Children

May not be naturally so. Thousands of children who have been disinclined to study, and hence called backward, have by being equipped with glasses been transformed into bright, ambitious students. So before children are blamed for lack of interest in studies they should have the condition of their eyes determined.

Our service is of value in this respect.

THE FAIR AT LANSDOWNE

One of the Best Township Exhibitions in the Province—Many Exhibitors.

Regular fall weather ushered in the Lansdowne Fair on Thursday. This is the fifty-ninth exhibition of the Lansdowne Agricultural Society, and during these years the fair has been an annual occurrence. As Thursday was the opening day of the fair, things were not really in full swing, but the directors hoped for a bumper attendance on Friday. S. C. E. Dixon, secretary-treasurer of the society, when speaking to the Whig, stated that the exhibits this year were not quite as numerous as last, but taking all things into consideration, he was certain that it was one of the best township shows in the province. In 1922 there were 1746 exhibits, whereas there were about 1650 this year. Following is a list of the entries: horses, 140; cattle, 115; sheep 11; swine, 33; poultry, 225; ladies' work, 400; art, 200; domestic manufacture 11; grain, 14; vegetables 147; and a number of smaller entries.

Considering the very dry summer, the display of vegetables was larger than was anticipated. James McKee of the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, who was the judge of grain and vegetables, stated that the exhibits at Lansdowne fair compared very favorably with what he had seen at the other exhibitions so far this season. There was an excellent lot of potatoes. Mr. McKee said that after judging at the Toronto exhibition, he must say that Lansdowne potatoes were just as good. The grain exhibit was not large, but excellent considering the dry weather of the past summer. George W. Lee, Warburton, got the first prize on white oats and barley, while Joshua Humphrey had the first class peas.

An unusual exhibit in the poultry building was the showing of some fine cats with their kittens. There are more pussies at Lansdowne than any other place in Ontario. Two hounds were also on exhibition. In the large poultry shed there were all kinds of chickens. M. C. Wallace, Iroquois, who was judge of poultry had a difficult task in awarding the prizes, as so many good birds were shown.

On the second floor of the main building was one of the finest exhibits of fancy-work which has been seen at any fair in years. The work was wonderful, and certainly speaks well for the needle-craft of the Lansdowne community; one exhibitor alone had 120 pieces of work on exhibit. A very large number of the exhibits were shown for the first time and they were eagerly watched by the women.

The Midway, which usually plays a large part in all fairs, was not to be seen this year.

During the afternoon one horse race was held and it resulted in Wellington Landon taking three heats, Charles Foley, three seconds, and Turner, three thirds. The best horse races were slated for Friday afternoon.

Two of the oldest men at the fair grounds were C. F. Rath, and Adam Peatty. Both these men have been in attendance at the fairs since they were young men, and it is doubtful if they ever missed an exhibition, if they were anywhere near the village of Lansdowne. J. F. Doan, bookseller, who was for forty-two years secretary of the show, is another enthusiastic admirer of the Lansdowne exhibition.

Among the Exhibitors.

The following were the chief exhibitors at the fair: Horses: Martin Horton, Fred McDonald, Arden Warren, D. H. Latimer, David Graham, W. R. Smith and Son, Robert Shields, James H. Graham, W. H. ## MONKEY A LUXURY; TAME BEAR IS NOT

The French Finance Minister Give Some Decisions on Taxable Articles.

Paris, Sept. 14. — Pyjamas costing 150 francs are a necessity in France, but when you pay 150 francs, that is a luxury. If you keep a pet monkey, that is a luxury, but a tame bear is not. Partridge may be eaten without incurring the accusation of extravagance, but if you stuff the partridge with truffles, that is a luxury.

The above are official rulings picked at random from a long list prepared by Finance Minister de Lasteyrie and signed by President Millerand. For the luxury tax still exists and is included in the price paid by the public and remitted to the state by the tradespeople. That is why the finance minister occupies himself with such things as deciding down to the minutest details everybody's daily wants, ranging from a mustard pot—which becomes luxury at 8 francs—to a funeral wreath which must not exceed 150 francs.

Future historians of remote periods will probably be able to draw interesting conclusions from this document regarding French hotels of 1923.
