SUIT CASE WAS STOLEN
CONTAINING CLOTHING

Thief Cut the Case to Pieces and Discarded the Contents.

Some time during Tuesday night, some person stole a suit case from an automobile near the corner of Division street and Raglan Road. It is believed that the party taking the suit case had an idea that it contained something very valuable, perhaps some liquor. However, the case contained clothing belonging to a lady visiting in the city. The matter was reported to the police, but it was not until Wednesday afternoon that the police got trace of the missing suit case, when it was ascertained that it had been taken to a quarry near Frontenac school and the contents dumped out. Constable Frederick Clark went to the scene and succeeded in securing some of the clothing, but it is stated that the suit case had been cut to pieces.

Thieves Looking for Money Were Sadly Disappointed.

Kingston's public library building was broken into during Wednesday night, evidently by some person or persons who were looking for some money, but they went away without a haul. The fact that no books were taken showed that the intruders were not after reading matter. Entrance was secured by breaking in one of the doors at the rear of the library.
