LIGHT OF NORTH FICKLE AS YOUNG SCHOOL GIRL

So Say the Radio Fans Who Live Near the Polar Spectrum's Influence.

Jack Wade, Alaska, Oct. 19.—Observation of the Aurora Borealis has regained its position as a popular sport among scientists owing to its supposed interference with radio transmission.

The Northern Lights are as fickle and changeable as a sixteen-year-old school girl. One style starts out on the horizon to the northward in searchlight fashion, darts and zig-zags; spreads out fan-shape, sweeps, floats, or drifts.

Once I came from Steel Creek to this place, about sixteen miles, along a high mountain trail with the mail man for this route. It was 9 p.m. We were in the lights for an hour.

The lights show up commonly from September to April, though April is getting late and warm for them. They are always different in their daily movements and never fail to attract attention, even from the old timers who have been in the far north since '98.

With real winter weather but a short time away, it behooves owners of residence and business properties to have the plumbing and heating systems in these places inspected and any needed repairs made.

The proverbial "stitch in time" often saves big money when applied to the correction of a defect in the plumbing or heating systems of a property. Oftentimes a small leak or break in some vital part of the systems can be repaired quickly and at a very moderate cost, which, had it been allowed to go unlooked after, might possibly develop into a serious break with resultant high charge for repairs.

Such possibilities can be eliminated by periodic inspections of the plumbing and heating systems. The added efficiency which properly functioning systems afford soon more than defrays the small cost of having an error corrected.

What the Footman Said. The other day Lord Maghera-morne, formerly Sir James McGeare-Hogg, explained that when he first succeeded to his peerage his name was a source of difficulty.

"Lord Maghera-morne," repeated the visitor, with emphasis. The footman was in despair, as he felt it was impossible to attempt to render the uncouth gutturals, and the visitor was advancing to the drawing-room. He hesitated for a moment, then boldly flung open the door and proclaimed: "The late Sir James Hogg."

Not Convinced. "Remember, my good man," said the visitor kindly, "that stone walls do not a grison make, nor iron bars a cage."

METHOD AND SYSTEM TRUE BASIS OF PERSONAL THRIFT

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

"I can't understand why I am always running behind in my personal financial affairs," a man who earns a handsome salary said to the writer some time ago.

The very first step must be a daily record of expenditures. We dare say that the majority of those who begin this plan will soon be astonished at the amount of money they waste during the course of a month.

Figures do not lie. You can't spend your money and have it. If you want to spend constructively and save wisely you must eliminate the little wastes.

The plan was tried. Every penny of expense was jotted down and at the end of the month the man found that he had spent about $100 more than he had thought was his custom.

That explained the reason why he was always in a quandary about his personal affairs. When he was brought face to face with conditions he began to change his habits, and his situation improved in like proportion.

There are no doubt many such persons as the one referred to who constantly are running behind and cannot understand why or indifference. It may seem like a waste of time and effort to keep a strict record of every penny you spend, but it is the best method of getting on the right track in the management of your personal affairs.

Personal thrift, like business efficiency, is a matter of method and system. It must be founded on complete knowledge of one's affairs.

SERVICE OF FINEST GIVEN BY THE CENTRAL

Large Garage Offers Last Word in Accommodation to the Motoring Public.

In all the garages to be found throughout the province it would be hard to find one that offers a more complete or up-to-date service than that supplied by the Central Garage, corner of Brock and Montreal streets, Kingston.

The building was entirely gone over, the old tower removed and in its place one of the finest service stations to be found anywhere erected and the offices placed in the new building.

Gas and oils are given here with the minimum of time. The oil is kept measured in quart bottles and allows the speediest of service. The large driveway also makes for speed and more and more car owners are stopping in there.

The Central Garage has the agency for Studebaker and Chevrolet motor cars and 1924 models of excellence are now being demonstrated. If you have never been to this garage pay it a visit now. It is worth it.

The Difference. A negro met an acquaintance, also a negro, on the street one day and was surprised to see now his friend had on a new suit, new hat, new shoes and other evidences of prosperity.

"Hey, boy," he said, "how come you dressed up that way? Is you got a job?" "I've got somethin' bettern' any job," replied the other, "I've got a profession."

Non-sinkable Bathing Suit. Made of rubberized silk, a bathing suit made with air pockets so it will float the person in the water, has been patented by a middle western man.

Not Convinced. "Remember, my good man," said the visitor kindly, "that stone walls do not a grison make, nor iron bars a cage."

ALADDIN OUTDONE IN MANY KITCHENS

Even Ben Franklin Would Marvel When Mrs. Modern Housekeeper Prepares Meal.

Little did old Benjamin Franklin realize the tremendous chain of causation he set up when he attached to his kite the key which unlocked the door which has led to the modern wonders of electricity. Some day perhaps Conan Doyle or Sir Oliver Lodge may succeed in having the old gentleman visit a modern kitchen when a meal is being prepared in an electric range.

"Come on now," she says, "let's go to the Follies. The meal will be as ready for us to sit down to when we return."

"But my! my! How will the food be cooked?" queries Ben Franklin's Shade. "And more important still, who will watch to see that it does not burn? I expect to be hungry, you know, and I abominate stove-ly cooking."

"Goodness me!" she exclaimed, "and you were the man who flew that famous kite! I thought surely you would know."

"Why, if this is a stove," he demands, "where's the fire? And where is the draft? And where's the chimney?"

"Well, the world does more, doesn't it, sir? Now look, I set it so. That's all I have to do. Now about the time Will Rogers is making us laugh over his drooleries this clock will turn on the current—electricity, you know — you ought to know, anyway. And about the time I'm telling you to be sure and employ a return taxi with a cheap rate this clock will work again, turning off the current."

"And when I get home," she continues, "the meal will be done to a turn and ready for us to sit down to. And while I am putting it on the table you can compose another of your famous maxims, something about cooking electrically. And be sure and sign your name to it, won't you? I want to show it to my friends."

"Great is electricity," murmurs the old gentleman, looking around for his cane and shovel hat. "I'll have to think up an electrical slogan this very night!"

A Remarkable Horse. A story is told by an English comedian about the man whose wife said:—"Who's that Dorothy you were talking about in your sleep?" "That's all right, dear," said he. "Horse I won ten pounds on yesterday. Here's a fiver to buy a new hat."

Something to Celebrate. "I hear you gave a delightful party last night, old chap. What was it to celebrate?" "It was for my wife. It's the tenth anniversary of her thirtieth birthday."

handled by a stern judge, has never been superseded as an awe-inspiring instrument of justice.

One Way or the Other. The doctor, on his round of golf, was crossing the field with his small negro caddy, when the latter opened the conversation with, "Doctor, ain't you got some shoes up yonder in yo' locker you don't want?"

Just One. The young man approached the father of his sweetheart with the request to marry her.

"Can you support a family?" the old man asked. "Heavens!" the indignant suitor replied, "I only asked for the girl."
