HOW SLEEP THE BRAVE

 The night was falling fast, and there in the gathering gloom I waited for over an hour for the last company coming in. In the darkness one was especially touched by the meaning of those little crosses. In fitful light beneath the star-shells they loomed before me in momentary flashes, then faded in the night.

How profound was the peace that lingered round that spot! In front of me I could see the white glare that marked the firing-line, whence came now and then the rattle of musketry, the popping of machine-guns, or the crump of bursting shells.

Behind me in Givenchy town the artist was still performing on the grand piano. "The Pink Lady" was the limit of his repertoire, but the Irrepressibles still danced on. Between the grim firing-line on the one hand, and the revelry of the Highlanders on the other, stretched those little wooden crosses. In their quiet plot the brave slept well that night, for they had done their duty.

Their work was finished, and well might they sleep on, knowing that those comrades whom they left behind would carry on in their stead, and that, even as they, their comrades behind would be faithful unto death.

From our line the rattle of rifles told me that England was busy and that our troops up there were keeping the faith.
 "I've copped it, mate, swat 'em one for me," were the dying words of a game little cockney.

"Go about your duty," was the last speech of the stricken Col. MacLean, of the 6th Gordons, to those who paused in the fighting to attend to him.

What all those dead required was that the living should fight on, and thus keep faith with them. Up and down that bivouac of the dead I seemed to feel the unseen sentry walking. Where they had pitched their silent tents, they, too, had set their silent picket. That night, above those shadowy graves, the sentry of the dead paused and listened. From the line came the sound of fighting. From behind came the voice of revelry and song. And this was as it should be. Not in repining, but in gladness, must the soldier spend his resting hours. Soon, perchance, that Highlander who was pounding out "The Pink Lady," and all his jolly dancers, would join these in their narrow beds. But there they were playing their part as true soldiers.

I seemed to hear the sentry of the dead cry out that night: "All's well! All's well!" The brave might sleep their sleep in peace, because their comrades behind were doing their duty.

I was in Ypres salient in April, 1915, and back there again in the spring of 1916. That bloody and awful salient is a vast graveyard of Canada's fairest and best. If where an Englishman is buried on a foreign soil is called "A little bit of England," then we may call Ypres a mighty bit of Canada.

One morning in August, 1916, our brigade of artillery said "Good-bye" to "Wipers." With mingled feelings I turned back in my saddle and gazed long and intently at the tragic place that had cost us so much of our precious blood. The towers of the Cloth Hall and the cathedral were in ruins. The high steeple of the Poperinghe church still stood. I was glad to bid these landmarks all good-bye, but in those fields and hills beyond I left my heart with many a fallen comrade. Often since my heart has journeyed back there to those same tragic fields in which they sleep. But I know that they are sleeping well, in the repose of those whose work is nobly done.

I met a certain woman at dinner once, a representative of that prosperous type of female referred to by the prophet Amos as the "Kine of Bashan." She waved her hands and deplored the fact that "poor dear General Pershing had to go to France!"

I said to her, "Madam, what are soldiers for?"
 She replied, "Oh, yes, but we may lose them!"
 I answered: "Did you lose Stonewall Jackson when he fell gloriously fighting at Chancellorsville? Did you lose any of your brave who have died for their country?"

Corpl. Fisher was a college boy in Canada in the spring of 1914. In the spring of 1915 he was the bastion of the British line at Ypres. Only a school boy yesterday; but to-day, with the gray waves of Germans rolling toward him, he and his machine-gun were the rock on which the whole line held or broke.

Corpl. Fisher was young in years, but he stuck to his post of duty, and died in the fullness of honor. In time to come school boys of our great dominion will hear how Corpl. Fisher won the Victoria Cross in his passing. His career, so short, and yet so bright, will remain one of Canada's shining and everlasting possessions.

On this Armistice day, 1923, it is for us the living, to remember our debt to comrades gone. Because they have fought a good fight, because they have kept the faith, Canada has become a name in history.

New Method Of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh steadily and easily without injury to the stomach or the causing of wrinkles and without the help of exercising, dieting or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) can be obtained of any druggist the world over or from the Marmola Company, 4812 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for one dollar a box, which is a decidedly economical price, considering the number of tablets each box contains. They are harmless.

Home Made Cough Mixture Considered Best

Spreads Over Membrane, Soothes, Heals and Stops Cough Almost Instantly.

Costs But a Trifle

Make your own cough syrup in two minutes at home if you want the best. Simple coughs, or stubborn coughs, it doesn't matter which, this home made mixture will stop them quicker than any expensive cough syrup you can buy ready made. It's fine for chest colds too and for acute nasal catarrh. Get from any druggist one ounce of Parment (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it, and children like it. Like a soothing, healing poultice one costly substance in this home made cough mixture spreads itself completely over the membrane of the throat. This causes the most stubborn hang-on cough to cease almost instantly. No ordinary slow-acting cough syrup contains this expensive ingredient.

And remember—any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness. Get Parment and get better.

BANDITS HELD TOWN AT BAY FOR HOURS

Kept Up Heavy Fire While Bank Was Looted, Then Shot Up Town.

Ogden, Kan., Nov. 10.—Eight or ten bandits in wild west fashion held this town of 500 inhabitants at bay for two hours early yesterday while they blasted their way through the door of the vault in the Ogden state bank. Guards stationed outside the bank kept up a heavy fire until their companions gained access to the vault and looted it. Then, shouting derisively, the bandit gang shot up the town as they walked to their two motor cars on the edge of the city and drove away.

Bank officials estimate the loot at approximately $26,000. The bandits got $2,000 and $24,000 in Liberty bonds.

No trace of the bandits has been found as yet.

Telephone, telegraph and electric light wires were cut by the bandits before the raid opened.

Eight or nine charges of explosives were required before the vault door finally yielded. Volleys of shots greeted every person that appeared during the hold-up and every light that appeared near the bank.

The final blast sent a chunk of steel through a clock, stopping it at 4 a.m. The explosives demolished the side of the bank.

Marshal Joe Kennitz fired several shots from behind a tree across the street from the bank but aside from drawing fire of the guards, accomplished nothing. Citizens who ventured into the streets were driven to their homes by bullets from the bandits' weapons.

After the bandits had held the town about one hour, Joseph Bolter, a citizen, drove to Humboldt Central, across the Kansas River and spread the alarm. Police of Junction City and Manhattan and a detachment of soldiers hurried here, but found no trace of the robbers, who had departed half an hour previous.

"Poppy Day" in Kingston. Saturday was observed as "Poppy Day" in Kingston in aid of the G.W.V.A., and judging by the number of poppies worn during the day, the appeal was met with a very liberal response.
