

Business Success

There is nothing that creates confidence in oneself like a bank account.

Many a bright young business man steps briskly along the street to his office each morning with a happy, confident appearance, which is the envy of others. These young men are confident because they have the guarantee of a steadily increasing savings bank balance behind them, giving protection to those at home. They are not disturbed by the daily problems of their business, which they invariably solve successfully.

These bright young men of initiative and ability are the hope of our tomorrow.

Many of them carry substantial savings accounts in The Bank of Toronto. We invite you to join them—Canada needs bright, thrifty, capable, business men. A friendly reception awaits you at any one of our Branches.

The Man On Watch

No further investigation is required as to how convicts get out of prison. What is needed is to seal up the avenue of escape.

Probably not more than two or three persons in the penitentiary wish Red Ryan and his criminal associates back at Portsmouth. They would only cause worry.

There are, however, some people who should be returned and they are the retiring members of the utilities commission—but to their civic duties.

The Watchman hears that Boo-Hoo, the university little mascot bear, is to find a home on the Main Duck Islands with the other wild animals up in Lake Ontario. Boo may not like the change.

By the way, the Wolfe Island council might engage Boo-Hoo to guard some of the hen roosts that are being robbed across the harbor.

Wolfe Island is losing quite a number of its stalwart residents who appear to have a liking for Uncle Sam's domains. The Wolfe Islanders are so close to the American shore—only a mile away on the southern side—that they may think they really belong to Uncle Sam.

Years ago there was a system in the Portsmouth penitentiary whereby one of the heads of that institution encouraged tattling among the convicts as well as among the guards. By this means he was kept thoroughly posted.

Tattling is a dirty trade. There are mothers who discourage their children in regard to tattling and they are right. It's spying, and the average person detests the spy. Our laws, however, have encouraged the informer or tattler.

It cannot be said that Queen's is merely after the big money in regard to playing championship rugby games away from Kingston. In the first place the players do not receive a dollar. Then again Queen's played the final in Kingston last year when it would have received several thousand dollars more by playing in Toronto. Queen's assuredly needs money, but it never stoops low to pick any up.

Portsmouth roads are to be all improved. Convicts who later on make their getaway will find them in splendid condition for speeding to liberty.

Down in Maxville some vandals upset a number of tombstones. Some graveyards, however, present a worse appearance than a band of vandals could give them—with monuments and headstones leaning over and many flat on the ground.

through neglect. It seems a pity that the living do not keep the resting places of the dead in their neighborhood more beautiful, even if they are not responsible.

The best thing the city council can do is to cease haggling and pay over its charitable grants to the infans' and orphans' homes, if only to recognize the splendid work being done for the fallen and unfortunate by the women workers of Kingston, who labor much to help those who are down.

One thing the Watchman has noticed about the championship rugby games here and that is that Varsity and McGill accept adverse decisions in better part than do Queen's. There was never a word out of the Toronto players last Saturday when they were severely penalized.

Kingston will not get a new hotel until all factions are agreed. There are several factions still existing here. When the people are a unit there will be a hotel. It was the lack of unity—as to a site that caused the breakdown of a most promising scheme twenty years ago.

With a dye factory established here, there should be no more gray heads in Kingston. Surely all the ladies will vote for the bonus bylaw. Probably the factory will have something to offer the baldheads too.

It must be agreed that Queen's is not wholly the poor man's college. It used to be but the fur-coated coats have caused an Ottawa writer to dispute the appellation. Levana can certainly take its place among the smart set.

THE GREAT SILENCE

NOVEMBER 11.

Not here but somewhere o'er the restless main
Beneath the daisy sweet, the violet blue,
They sleep who went but came not back again;
Nor will return till all the years are through
Not all the wealth of nations can recall
A single phalanx of those glorious dead,
Who held the Empire's shield above us all,
And for our hearths and homes undaunted bled,
While death was swallowed up in victory.
No greater love than this can man e'er see.

Twice sixty seconds; and the mother's heart,
Frozen with sorrow, misses its great beat,
As deathlike silence stills the roaring mart,
And spreads its hush along the crowded street.
The poignant moments, flitting one by one,
Fall on a world that grief has stricken dumb.
"Shall their great love and service be forgot
In treacherous memories or the waste of years?"
Never while sons by Britishers begot
Can answer through the mist of gath'ring tears
"We will keep faith with you—who, gone before,
In deathless glory live forevermore."
Frank Fairleigh.
