THE NOMINATION SCHEME FOR BRITISH SETTLERS

Is To Be Promoted by the Church of England in Canada.

The Church of England in Canada through its Council for Social Service and with the hearty approval of the Department of Immigration of the government of Canada at Ottawa, hopes to promote negotiations of suitable British immigrants by its congregations in places where there is real room for and need of desirable immigrants. At the annual meeting of the council held at Calgary the executive committee presented a carefully prepared report on the government's nomination scheme by which, acting in conjunction with the government of Great Britain under the Empire Settlement Act, loans not exceeding seventy-five per cent. of the cost of third-class boats and colonial rail-transportation may be made to British subjects now resident in Great Britain, provided that satisfactory assurance is given that the person nominated will settle on the land and engage in farming in Canada, and that they are nominated by a British subject in Canada who undertakes to guarantee the gradual repayment of the loan (without interest) in semi-annual instalments. In his report as general secretary, Canon Vernon said: "The government's nomination scheme preserves the independence of the immigrant by requiring the gradual repayment of the loan advanced for passage money, while the fact that the newcomer has in his nominator a relative or friend, who is financially as well as sympathetically interested in his success in the new country, is a distinct advantage."

"Those who have already come should be the best advertisement of the advantages Canada has to offer, and the advertising such successful settlers do will naturally be among their own relatives and acquaintances. But what of the prospective settler who has no friend or relative in this country willing to nominate him and to guarantee the repayment of his passage money? He is none the less desirable, even though for lack of already made friends his satisfactory settlement in this country may be somewhat more difficult. May I venture to suggest that here lies a grand opportunity for the exercise of that social ministry, that fellowship, which should be distinguishing marks of the Church of Christ. I should like to see the council give earnest and careful consideration to the question as to whether in close co-operation with the Church in England our own Canadian church cannot take a larger and more constructive part in Empire settlement and in building the Canadian nation. In the main I am convinced that the best results are to be obtained by the careful selection and settlement of individuals and of families in communities already established, which will welcome, cheer and advise them in the spirit of real fellowship. Why should not efforts be made to induce Anglican congregations in Canada to become responsible as nominators for one or more newcomers? The first step would be a survey of conditions and a statement of the type of immigrant needed in that particular community."

"Empire Settlement and church-building in a new land calls for the best the Motherland and the mother church has to offer. The securing and the placing of the immigrant might well be the joint work of a congregation in Great Britain and a congregation in Canada. "Cannot we, acting with the mother church, bring it about that Anglo-Canadians coming to Canada are: 1. Selected, aided, and advised by a church congregation in England. 2. Conducted, when necessary, under church auspices, and 3. Settled, advised and encouraged in Canada by a congregation of the old church in the New Land? I earnestly submit these suggestions for the serious consideration of our council."

Since the annual meeting of the council the matter has been still further considered by the executive committee, the hearty approval of the federal department of immigration has been secured, and Canon Vernon, the general secretary of the council, has been authorized by the executive to take steps to work out and carry into practice such a scheme of group nominations by church congregations. Of course, it is fully recognized that the step is experimental, but it is seemingly an experiment most distinctly worth while. More and more thinking Canadians are realizing that the future of Canada depends very largely on the growth of the nation through immigration, and that if the best results are to be obtained that immigration must be predominantly of the very best British stock. Moreover, as was pointed out in the memorial presented on March 10th, 1922, to Premier King by the official boards of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions in Canada: "Admission should be granted only to classes and kinds of immigrants actually needed and the nation's capacity to incorporate into the body politic should determine the number received. No more immigration should be admitted than can find steady and useful employment without endangering normal standards of life, labor and wages."

A significant picture at Bonar Law's funeral, in which the leaders of the three great political parties in Great Britain are grouped around the heir to the throne. The Prince of Wales is conversing with Ramsay MacDonald, the leader of the British Labor-Socialists. H. Asquith, leader of the Liberal party, is at the left, and Premier Baldwin, leader of the Conservatives, on the right. This is a picture which could scarcely be duplicated in any country in the world, for British statesmen of rival parties are often good friends in private life.

Tax exempt securities tend to retard business progress.

If a large proportion of our national income continues to go into tax exempt securities instead of into active, productive business growth will soon be at a standstill and the scale of living will toboggan downward. The National Industrial Conference board estimates that the United States needs about six billion dollars annually for new capital expenditures. They also estimate that the United States had about twelve and one-half billions of national income in 1921.

Taxes consumed about eight and one half billions of dollars of this sum, leaving about four billion to meet the demands of new capital investment. Out of this available four billions of dollars, two billion went into tax exempt securities, leaving only two billion to cover the normal growth which should have had six billions available.

AVERT SERIOUS FIRE IN DESERONTO STORE

A Small-pox Case Is Discovered—Burial of the Late E. Edwards.

Deseronto, Nov. 22.—Edward Coles' barber shop on Main street, was threatened with fire on Monday afternoon. The fire was first noticed near a window in the basement and had it not been for the prompt arrival of the brigade and their quick work, a bad blaze would have been the result. The damage was small.

E. Edwards, who was manager of a store at Donald, died very suddenly at that town on Monday, and his body was brought to Deseronto, his former home, for burial. The body was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Mary Edwards, to his daughter's, Mrs. Leo Therrien's, on Dundas street, and the funeral was held yesterday morning. Services were conducted by Rev. Fr. Meagher in St. Vincent de Paul church, thence to the Deseronto cemetery.

A rather bad case of small pox has been discovered on Thomas street, the victim being a young man employed at the glass factory. The house has been put under quarantine. Dr. Wallbridge has charge of the case.

WHY THE WEATHER?

Clouds as Wind Indicators. The clouds play an important part as indicators of the direction and speed of winds aloft. When the aviator or meteorologist wants to know conditions in the free air he may send up a pilot balloon and watch it travel as it rises, which does very well in a clear atmosphere, but is useless as soon as it disappears in a cloud. Or he may simply watch cloud motions. A cloud, being merely an aggregate of liquid or solid particles, usually travels with the same speed and direction as the wind at its level. Rising thunderheads and the cumulus cloud in its early stages are exceptions since their air has just come from lower, slower levels. So also is the well-defined lamination cloud, often called crest cloud, banner cloud, or billow cloud, which marks the standing crest of a wave when air is streaming over an obstruction, such as a mountain range. With these exceptions, clouds indicate the winds. But from the angular motions of clouds, which alone usually are observable, actual speeds are not obtainable unless the distances are known. Rarely can a single observer establish the height, excepting in the case of clouds formed from air recently at the ground level or such clouds as show city lights or intercept searchlight beams at a known distance. When cumulus clouds pierce several cloud layers it is a simple matter to get the relative heights of the layers and from a computed height of the cumulus base find the actual heights. Pilot balloon and cloud observations in conjunction give the most satisfactory results, for the balloon can be used to find the cloud heights as well as to indicate the winds at the cloudless level.

TOYS OF GERMAN MAKE. General MacBrien Speaks in Favor of Protection. London, Nov. 23.—Major-General James H. MacBrien, well-known Canadian military officer, speaking in behalf of Lieut.-Col. Hamilton Gault, formerly of Montreal, Conservative candidate for the Taunton division of Somersetshire, said he was returning to the dominion without the toys, which he had intended to buy for his children, because he declined to purchase them when he found that they were all made in Germany. The Canadian manufacturing industries would be wiped out, General MacBrien said, only for the fact that Canadian Conservatives and Liberals both favored protection.
