MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments

One of our most successful financiers once remarked, "I never try to buy at the bottom or sell at the top." What did he mean?

The statement above indicates that the successful financier was a long-pull trader on the security markets. The long-pull trader realizes the folly of trying to pick the exact top or the exact bottom of prices in either the stock or bond markets.

Securities move up and down over a period of years in a more or less definite trend. There are times when prices are too high and also times when they are too low.

When prices are low, the long-pull trader buys. He doesn't waste time or energy fretting whether or not they will go lower. When prices are high he sells and keeps his money liquid in short-term securities or a savings account until prices are down again.

He is satisfied to buy somewhere near the bottom and sell somewhere near the top.

The chances are that the man who tries for the exact top or bottom will lose his sense of perspective and get badly fooled.

The long-pull trader, on the other hand, will make a fair profit over a period of years because his judgment is not clouded by day-to-day events, which are relatively unimportant in the long run.

President of the Home Bank of Canada, who appeared recently in court to answer charges of conspiracy, as a weak and broken man, supported by a nurse. His appearance was followed on Friday by the seizure of Home Bank books and papers at the head offices, by officers of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department. The papers refer to loans made to companies in which directors of the bank were interested.

WHY THE WEATHER?

DR. CHARLES F. BROOKS
Secretary, American Meteorological Society, Tells How.

Recent Flood Rains in Mexico and Panama

Early reports from Mexico indicate that during September, October and November rains of "unprecedented" volume fell more or less continuously for days and days during the prevalence of the unusual gales of cold air from North America into a tropic. Innumerable washouts and landslides over much of the country rendered railroad travel dangerous and almost impossible.
Similar conditions probably prevailed throughout Central America, for great floods occurred in Panama, especially during the latter part of October. Autumn rains in Panama are always heavy, as at this season large masses of very humid air are being forced upward by the invading colder air from the north. October normally gives Panama from 10 to 17 inches of rain but the great rainfall recently experienced far surpasses these amounts. Panama in such wet times may receive in one month about as much rain as the average for the United States for a year.

How hard it can rain in Panama is shown in the records of Porto Bello on the Atlantic Coast of the Canal Zone. Forty-eight inches is the average rainfall there in October and November together. Rains of five inches or more in a day are not infrequent, while on November 29th, 1911, 6.31 inches was recorded in two hours, and 2.47 inches of this amount in only three minutes.

SCOTCH DISTRICTS GOING "WET"

Five Burghs Won by the Drys Reverse Vote.

Edinburgh, Dec. 3.—Nearly half of the 257 boroughs in which local option polling is to take place before Dec. 25th already have voted, and results show that the wets are more than maintaining their ground. They have won back five districts lost to the drys three years ago and have lost none.

A striking aspect of the returns has been the increased number of votes favoring a return of freedom from all restrictions. In our dry boroughs the majority for continuation of the existing regime was substantially reduced, and reductions also were made in five boroughs, where a limited form of prohibition will be continued.

The darkest night that ever fell upon the earth never hid the light: never put out the stars. If only made the stars more keenly, kindly glancing, as if in protest against the darkness.
Often the grand meanings of faces, as well as written words may be chiefly in the impressions of those who look on them.
