CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE
By Uncle Ray

How Rerir Won Helga. Frigg was the goddess of love after marriage, but there was another goddess who helped lovers. Her name was Freya. Freya often helped man and maid come together. One of the Norse stories I like best is about two lovers she saved from the sea. This is how the story goes: There once lived a winsome lass named Helga. She was the daughter of a gruff old warrior, the king's chief soldier.

Freya in her chariot.

Rerir, son of Thorkill the Red-beard, fought against Helga's father. Losing the battle, he was driven to a lonely island far out in the sea.

It happened that the young noble was in love with Helga; but what chance did he have when her father was his enemy?

There was just one chance; to steal her away.

In a frail boat, Rerir set out for the shore near where Helga lived. She happened to be strolling on the beach when he landed.

Beholding her hero, she wept and said in a sobbing voice:

"My father will not let me marry you. He is planning to make me wed a rich noble whom I do not like. But remember, I shall love you always."

"Oh, Helga!" cried he, "a lonely isle lies beyond the foaming sea. Bold rovers know it as a safe retreat. Be thou mine and fly with me."

The maiden trembled. She wanted to go, but feared the anger of her father.

"No, no," she said, "I must not go."

Rerir, in the agony of grief, sank on his knee and begged her to come with him.

Helga could not bear the sorrow of her lover. Stepping toward his little boat, she cried:

"Where thou goest, my beloved, is alone my home, my land."

Her father gave chase, but could not catch them. Out in the stormy sea, they were tossed about and it looked as though they would be drowned. Then came Freya to their rescue. She took them to her palace in heaven, where they lived in peace and joy.

LACK OF KNOWLEDGE.

Warren Illustrates Motherland's Ignorance of Dominions. London, Dec. 7.—Speaking at a dinner at the Newfoundland Club, at which he was the guest of honor, Premier Warren, of Newfoundland, told a story to illustrate the lack of knowledge of the Dominions in the Motherland.

He said that at the Imperial conference one day the question of defence came up. "I stated," he continued, "that as far as the navy was concerned, Newfoundland was prepared to do her part in the future as she had done in the past. I also said that Newfoundland in the war at sea had lost more men than all the other Dominions put together. That is a fact, but whoever edited the speech could not believe it. It was apparently absolutely beyond comprehension, so he put in the words, 'according to population.' Well, I got mad. I tore out the speech and refused to have it edited, but eventually I re-wrote it. I only quote the incident as an example of what people in England know about the Dominions and the colonies."

SAID ON THE SIDE

If you see a man sizing up the shop windows very carefully these days, it is a reminder that Christmas is near at hand.

Surely it is not necessary to remind citizens again of the slogan, "SHOP EARLY."

Many citizens are complaining about "sleeping sickness" these dark mornings.

Sidney Murrell, bank robber and alleged murderer, smashed up his cell in the London jail because the electric lights in his cell were not to his liking. Evidently Murrell thinks he has a right to kick about anything that does not suit him in a government institution, just like an hotel.

Every day we have something to be thankful for. Even the Weather Man is thoughtful of the man who has to shovel the snow off the sidewalk. But perhaps he will make up for it later on.

Don't write it "Xmas." Help along the campaign for the correct spelling.

One thing is sure, and that is that the tobacco sign placed in the cricket field is getting a lot of advertising.

Price of hogs is down. Let's have the price of Christmas turkeys without reason, and then everything will be "jake."

Farmers say they are saving a lot of feed because of the open weather. Horses and cattle are still in pasture, and it certainly means a great saving.

Christmas Savings in U.S. Will Total $206,606,800

New York, Dec. 7.—Christmas savings in the United States this year will total $206,606,800, an increase of $63,000,000 over last year. This is according to Herbert F. Rawl of New York, President of the Christmas Savings Club Corporation. This represents the savings during the year of the men, women and children who plan their Christmas expenditures from one year to another.

AWARDED $22,500.

New York Woman Wanted $75,000 for Husband's Death. New York, Dec. 7.—A verdict for $22,500 was returned on Thursday by a supreme court jury in the suit for $75,000 damages brought by Mrs. Annie Dreyer, against Joseph A. Corballis, Yonkers attorney, whom she charged with running down and John Bull, who operates his great mobile on Upper Fifth avenue, on March 3rd.

The German reichstag adopted all three paragraphs of the government's full-power bill.
