INDIA IS NOT READY FOR HOME RULE YET

An Address in Convocation Hall by Prof. Johann Masih of Indore.

One of the most pleasing and enlightening lectures given in Convocation Hall in many years was that by Prof. Johann Masih, Indore, India, who spoke in a very passionate strain to a large audience Friday night. Prof. Alexander MacPhail, in introducing the speaker, stated that he hoped the many problems and differences which separate us from the people of India might be explained by Prof. Masih, who belonged to the class of Indians who can act as go-betweens, between us and the Indian people.

Prof. Masih, in his introductory remarks, assured his hearers that he belonged to no political caste or society; he was not here to spread propaganda, and he esteemed it a privilege to address such a gathering as he had before him.

Going back to 1854 he eloquently described the progress of British rule in its application to India. India was in the throes of unrest when England took it over and is seething with unrest yet in spite of the efforts to help matters. The really great curse of India in its caste system, comprising many thousands of different castes each essentially different from each other in religion and customs. The millions of untouchables, the lowest caste of the country were in a terrible state, and until all castes in the land of many and varied peoples united it was foolish to talk of home rule.

The British government were not altogether blameless in the matter, as many promises have been made from time to time and have never been kept fully. He cited a very notable case in the recent salt tax levied on India. The Indian assembly voted it down but the viceroy passed the measure and by so doing they killed much of the faith in the British government.

Prof. Masih reviewed the life of the famous Indian leader Gandhi, showing the hold he had on the thought and life of the Indian people. He was a great power for reform both socially and politically. A friend of the British government at first he turned an absolute revolutionist after the massacre in the Punjab. Seemingly to lose his mind he carried on an active "soul" revolt against the British government only to end up by being sentenced to a sixty-year term of imprisonment.

In conclusion, Prof. Masih declared that India was not ready for home rule yet, but needed the helping hand of sympathy of the other members of the British Empire.

In a few words Prof. MacPhail expressed his appreciation in behalf of those present for the very eloquent and interesting lecture which Prof. Masih had given.

A Picton Social Event.
Picton, Dec. 14.—Mrs. James Wamsley, Main street East, gave a four-table bridge at her cosy home on Thursday evening. Pretty mums brightened the rooms, and the game was most enjoyable. Mrs. H. B. Bristol won the favor, a dainty bit of china.
