1067 TURKEYS SENT ACROSS THE BORDER

Placed in Special Car and Shipped Across Lake to Rochester, N.Y.

The largest shipment of live turkeys which ever left Kingston in one day was sent over the Canadian National Railway on Sunday. The turkeys were all bought in the Kingston district by Harry Card and forwarded to Rochester, N.Y. The birds were brought to the city on Saturday morning by farmers and placed in a special poultry car, the first of its kind to be brought to Kingston. This car is divided into cages each holding ten turkeys. When the car was ready to leave, it was stated that there were 1,067 turkeys in it.

The reason for sending the live turkeys across the border is on account of the duty, which is three cents a pound on live birds and twice that amount on dressed poultry. The car was taken to Rochester by way of Cobourg, and went across the lake by the car ferry.

Some farmers who brought the turkeys to the city had the misfortune to lose a number on account of the smaller birds getting tramped upon the larger ones. One Wolfe Islander brought a wagon load of turkeys across on the steamer and when he went to take the birds out of the wagon he found that nine had been tramped to death.

The price paid for the turkeys was from 20 to 25 cents a pound, according to quality.

QUEEN'S NIGHT IN TORONTO

Addresses by Hon. W. F. Nickle, Dr. Taylor and Prof. Sandwell.

Toronto Telegram. Queen's University is notable for that high quality of enthusiasm with which it endows its students, and this was the keynote of its alumni's dinner dance Friday night at the King Edward in the Pompeian Room. In the absence through illness of Col. D. M. Robertson, the president, Rev. D. M. Solandt, presided. Regrets from Ontario's Premier were read, and after the toast to the King came that to The Old University: "Which, next to our homes, gave us the ideals that are worth while in life." Coupled with that toast were the names of the Hon. Mr. Nickle and Principal Bruce Taylor. Before Ontario's Attorney-General rose to speak the three hundred guests sang their college song and then came the Queen's yell!

Building Costs a Drawback. Hon. Mr. Nickle, who is chairman of Queen's Board of Trustees, rose and paid his tribute to Principal Taylor. In rejoicing that the generosity of the late government had given Queen's one of the best training hospitals, Mr. Nickle deplored that the present excessive building costs meant that they were short $100,000 for their clinical building. The same difficulty had arisen over the new women's residence. Though its corner-stone had been laid, tenders showed that the proposed plans would cost fifty thousand dollars more than the $160,000 on hand. Hence delay until further assistance could be had was inevitable.

Football Season Too Long? Principal Taylor referred to Queen's fine $245,000 central heating plant and the new library, which when opened next year would house 340,000 books, and pleaded for some generous Queen's friend who would give them a quarter of a million for a students' union. With much pride, like the other speakers of the evening, he referred to Queen's football team.

"So different from the days when Varsity came down and just trod upon us."

However, Principal Taylor declared that both the boys and the college authorities felt that it was extending the football season too much for college students to go on with the Dominion championship. The Collegiate season was time enough for men to snatch from their studies. Principal Taylor, however, sympathized with the boys' desire for more gate money for Queen's, since they but got the receipts from so small a place as Kingston. He felt the gate money should be pooled. As for hockey, Queen's was again handicapped.

Praised R.M.C. Commandant. Queen's principal paid special tribute to the splendid way in which the present commandant, Sir Archibald Macdonell, had brought about such a fine spirit between the old-time bitter rivals, the R.M.C. and Queen's.

"They used to think we were a set of Hicks and we used to think them a set of snobs," smiled Principal Taylor, when telling of how the two institutions now met weekly for friendly games and gave mutual entertainments.

Prof. B. K. Sandwell, Queen's new professor in English literature, was introduced by the company. He gave his famous predecessors after his amusing address on "The Superiority of the College Graduates."

After his humorous prelude, Prof. Sandwell pleaded for a further recognition of their duty to the community by those who were supposed to have had their intellects developed by the study of the world's best thought of all time.

"I am tired of seeing things suppressed by law, and I'm sure the Attorney-General is equally tired," smiled Prof. Sandwell, in pleading for more personal effort in changing to-day's life and tastes.

POLICE FOUND A STILL AND QUANTITY OF LIQUOR

Herbert Reid and Joseph Jessop Before Court on Two Charges.

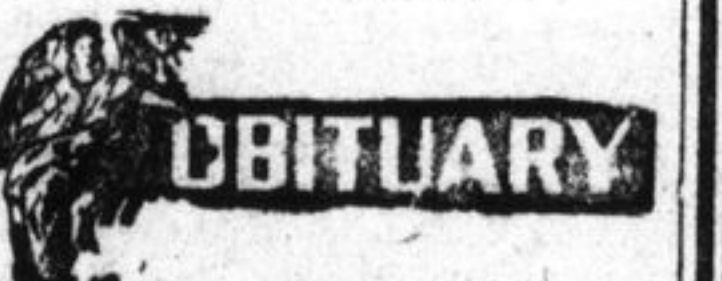

For having a still in their possession, and for having liquor for sale, Herbert Reid and Joseph Jessop, were dealt with by Magistrate Farrell, in the police court on Monday morning.

On a charge of having the still in their possession, a fine of $250 and costs and one month in jail, and in default of payment an additional six months in jail, was imposed on each of the men, and on a charge of having the liquor for sale, both were fined $200 and costs, or three months in jail, the sentences to run concurrently.

The charge for having the still was laid under the Inland Revenue Act, while the charge of having liquor for sale, was laid under the Ontario Temperance Act.

On Saturday as a result of complaints received, Sergt. John Naylor and Constable Thomas Mullinger went to 88 York street, armed with a search warrant, and as a result of their visit they discovered a still and quite a large quantity of liquor. The two men admitted being partners in the manufacture of the liquor. The police found seven bottles of liquor, two quarts in a jar, and two barrels of mash, amounting to about forty gallons.

A drunk was fined $10 and costs, or one month in jail. He said he secured six ounces of liquor on an order from a doctor.
