T. S. O'CONNOR DIES IN TORONTO HOSPITAL

He Was Secretary to the President of the Defunct Home Bank.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—Thomas S. O'Connor, private secretary to H. J. Daly, president of the defunct Home Bank, and who was held on $39,000 bail as a material witness for the Crown in prosecution of the directors and officials of the suspended institution, died in St. Michael's hospital early this morning—from uraemic poisoning. O'Connor was placed in the institution yesterday morning following complaints of pains in his head which he attributed to a fall while entering his apartment on Jarvis street on Friday night. The injury is said to have been contributory to his death, but in the opinion of Dr. Silverthorne of the hospital staff, the cause was uraemic poisoning resulting from kidney trouble.

Suffers Loss of Finger.
Mrs. McAlonan, wife of the cheesemaker at Sealey's Bay, underwent an operation for the removal of her finger at the General Hospital on Sunday. The operation was made necessary by an accident at her home when a window dropped down, crushing the finger and cutting off the end. Dr. I. G. Bogart performed the operation. Only a short time ago Mr. and Mrs. McAlonan suffered the loss of their barn by fire.

Lots of Nerve.
While a local taxi driver's car was parked in front of his stand, yesterday afternoon, some "enterprising" party detached the special thermometer cap from the radiator and made off with it. Fortunately a friend of the owner saw what happened and if the article is not soon returned there may be a police court case.
