MONTREAL UNIVERSITY DEFEATED IN OPENER

Queen's 7 to 2 Victors in Game Which Had Many Flashes of Sensational Speed.

In the opening senior intercollegiate game on Kingston ice at the Jock Hartly Arena last night Queen's defeated University of Montreal 7 to 2 and took a good start in the race. The victory last night leaves Varsity and Queen's running even for first honors and McGill and U. of M. also breaking even with one defeat each.

Last night's game was all that could be desired. The play here and there was a little ragged for senior hockey but at other times it was as fast as the sport has brought out anywhere. Both net-guardians started. Lajeunesse, the visiting goal-keeper, was on his job all the time and brought forth applause from the crowd on many occasions for his cool-headed and excellent work. Quinn was his usual self and saved some hard ones.

For Queen's Boucher was the outstanding player with Lindsay a close second. Boucher scored three and assisted in two goals. Lindsay scored two and assisted in two. Smith, with his long fast rushes, was also a great factor in the Queen's victory. His partner on the defense, Reynolds, was getting the rushes and breaking them up but his attacking was not as good as it has been in the past and he has not yet hit his stride. "Bill" Brown was all up and down right wing with the same fast action and "Don" McDonald filled in wherever needed and did so to perfection. Jack Bond, while not as effective as he might have been will make a good man if kept strictly to his own wing and made to develop his shot and use it.

For the visitors it is difficult to pick any one star, apart from the little goaler. Beaubien, Lapointe and Leduc seemed to have a little edge on their team-mates. Lapointe, at centre, was quite a revelation and the rushes of Beaubien from the defence lacked nothing in finish or danger to the opposing team. Leduc, the smiling little captain of the team, secured the first of their goals and carries a wicked shot.

On the whole the visitors form a snappy team which will increase in ability as the season advances. They show good combination play and individual ability. Both teams were very weak in shooting.

RUTH AIMS HIGH FOR 1924 SERIES

Has Four Different Objects in the Coming Baseball Campaign.

George Herman Ruth, who once or twice has been called "Babe," will be thirty years old on the 7th of February.

Ruth this same year will serve his tenth campaign as a major league regular, although the Nonpareil of the Bludgeoners tolled a few innings with the Red Sox late in 1914.

What is Ruth champion of? you may inquire. You can take your pick. Through 1923 he scored nineteen more runs than any other member of either major league. Tris Speaker being runner-up.

Ruth patterned over the platter, as the saying goes, 151 times in 152 games.

In addition to this, Ruth ran up a total of 399 bases, far in advance of the pack, and, after accepting something like 175 passes, still gave vent to 41 home runs, tying the season's mark with Cy Williams, of the Phillies.

While the home run deposits shrank a little from 1920 and 1921, 1923 was still the "Babe's" greatest all-round year.

He was the league's best hustler from April's start on through the dust of October's stretch, battling Harry Heilmann on one side, Cy Williams on the other, and still playing his other departments in defence and attack in sensational fashion.

There has been an idea in many quarters that Ruth is only a big slugger who can sock the ball, but who in other ways is a bit to the pomegranate or the early quince.

On the contrary, Ruth is a star outfielder, a wonderful judge of batting grooves and one of the best runners in the game.

With all his bulk, only four men in the American League stole more bases, and the "Babe" isn't carrying a jockey's weight when he thunders around the tow-path. Not by a number of ounces.

He gave Harry Heilmann, league leader, a grand battle to the last week, when the Tiger slipped on by to win by eight points.

The pre-eminent "Babe" starts 1924 as king of all the sluggers that ever lived, despite the fact that untoward incidents have prevented him from leading both leagues in home runs since 1921.

In the last four years alone he has accumulated 191 four-base hits, an average verging upon 48 a season.

And he has scored more runs through this period than any ball-player ever thought possible.

After all, the succulent tally is the factor that wins the game. It is the only ingredient which figures in the final score.

And it is in this department that Ruth has been supreme. His top mark is 177 runs, counted in 1921.

When you figure that such great run-getters as Cobb, Collins, Speaker, Hornsby and Frisch have never been able to approach these marks you can gather a better line on what has taken place.

We understand from official and personal sources that Ruth hopes to make 1924 his greatest campaign. Here is what he has in mind:

1. To lead both leagues in making home runs.
2. To lead his league at bat in the way of base-hit averages.
3. To lead in total bases.
4. To lead in runs scored.

The desire to accumulate another harvest of free passes is not a burning one. He has drawn his share from this department.

Ruth, at thirty, is still an athlete near his prime. Despite his unusual bulk, all set upon slender ankles, he is still as active and as agile as he was in the first two or three years of his life beneath the Big Tent.

He is still spry and nimble, a quick starter, with the leverage unimpaired.

Thirty isn't old for any sport. The "Babe" has been around for a long time, but he is only a year older than Dempsey or Tilden.

The rhythm of his swing remains flawless, and there is the same power in his punch.

He will again be Heilmann's leading rival, and the base-hit battle between this pair will be a 1924 feature worth more than casual inspection.

Max Carey, Pittsburgh, veteran led the outfielders in assists with 28, while only four others were credited with 20 or more. Arnold Stutz of the Cubs nipped 26 runners, while Ross Young of the Giants and Billy Southworth of the Braves, nipped 25 each. Bernie Nels of the Brooklyn team nipped 20 runners.

Furring it out on a percentage basis, Nels led the fielders for he participated in 111 games while the others played in more than 150.

Carey likewise topped the guardians of the daisy patches in putouts, too, for he captured 450 flies against 356 credited to Cy Williams of the Phillies.

FROM THE OUTSIDE—LOOKING IN.

This evening Frontenacs are at Brockville for their second game of the season. If they win they'll deserve their victory and should they lose—well, the other team will know it, has been in a game.

Queen's took a nice start in the senior intercollegiate race when they defeated University of Montreal last night. Either of those teams may give Varsity some tall worrying before the season is over. Toronto has held sway in hockey circles long enough.

To-morrow night Circle-Six play Brockville juniors here. The local youngsters had a good workout at the Arena last night after the intercollegiate game.

The Queen's team entertained the University of Montreal party, amounting to about twenty-five in all, to a dinner in the Red Room after last night's game. Principal the Rev. Bruce Taylor was at the head of the board and President "Don" McDonald, of the hockey club, held the chair. After a satisfactory repeat little addresses were given by the principal, Messieurs Villeneuve and Plomondon, Prof. M. B. Baker, and the captains of the teams. The Queen's and Montreal players then started a good-natured competition in singing and yell-giving. It is hard to say which set of young men was more mystified—Queen's with the French, or Montreal with the Gaelic.

The congratulations of the fans will be extended to J. E. R. ("Roy") Smith, defence man of the Queen's senior outfit, who was last night elected captain of the team for the present season. "Smitty" has given a lot of athletic service to Queen's. He is a sprinter, a football player, something of a boxer and wrestler, a baseball player and, perhaps, best of all in hockey. He has been with Queen's on a couple of intermediate championship teams and was with the seniors last year. He has rendered good work on the Athletic Board of Control. "Smitty" graduates in medicine this year. His choice is a popular one.

CALIFORNIA IS MECCA OF BRITISH GOLF PROS.

California is still the Mecca of golf professionals from all over the world. The latest arrival is Arthur Ham, an English professional of note, who has spent the last two years in New Zealand.

Ham and his family arrived from Wellington, N.Z. He was met at the dock by Willie McEwen, the Presidio professional, who also served an apprenticeship in New Zealand.

The newcomer is a fine golfer and has won his spurs both in England and Australia. He had won several important tournaments in the old country before he left for New Zealand two years ago, including the Lincolnshire professional tournament of 1921. He won the New Zealand open championship last year, and this year was runner up for the open championship of Australia.

Ham bears the reputation of being a first class professional beyond the realm of playing.

He is said to be a skillful instructor, an expert club maker and greenkeeper. He hopes to obtain an engagement in California.
