That loud applause greeted the ascent to the throne of the little screen actor, Jackie Coogan, whose wonderful power of expressing his meaning through his face and gestures while never losing his childlikeness, never fails to delight. But it was noticed that the Kingstonians who were so loyal to the little screen king could not stand at attention for thirty seconds while "The King" was played as the sovereign of the British Empire was thrown on the screen.

That the glorious sunshine of Friday was greatly appreciated after the dull weather of the last few weeks. A little more of this weather and the florists would have a display of flowers that would really look spring-like.

That Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, addressing a women's club on "The Beginning of Authorship," emphasized the study of the most suitable magazine as part of the author's A.B.C. An author who could write of an old subject from a new angle had achieved something of authorship. A publisher brought out books that he thought would sell, and he must refuse many.

Reader Friends have sent in the following recipes to help other readers: Subscriber—"Not long ago 'A.M.' requested recipes which called for rice flour. Here are two I have:

"Rice Flour Muffins"—Mix together one well beaten egg, one tablespoon of sugar, one cup of sweet milk and one and one-half cups of rice flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder. Turn the mixture into buttered gem-pans and bake in a hot oven for 25 minutes.

"Rice Flour Sponge Cake"—Beat the yolks of four eggs till thick, then beat into them one cup of granulated sugar and two teaspoons of vanilla. Fold in the stiffly-beaten whites of the four eggs alternately with three-fourths of a cup of rice flour. Bake from 35 to 40 minutes in an ungreased tin in a moderate oven."

J.M.—"In response to 'A.M.' who recently requested rice flour recipes, I am sending the following: "Rice Cakes"—Cream together three table spoons of butter and three table spoons of sugar; add one beaten egg, one teaspoon of lemon juice, one-half teaspoon of grated lemon rind, and one cup of rice flour. Turn out onto a bread board and roll very thin. Cut with a cookie cutter and bake in a hot oven for perhaps 15 minutes—or till brown."

F. A. H.—"Sourdough Bread:—To begin the process, make a sponge as for ordinary yeast bread, using either dry or compressed yeast. Let this dough or sponge set to rise, and after it rises let it set to sour, for three days, in a rather warm place. At any time after the ferment takes place, take a part of the sourdough and put it in your mixing bowl; add enough water to make the amount of dough you desire, then salt to suit the taste and add a small amount of sugar; set this in a warm place to rise and sour again (from time to time, as need requires, add to the first sponge, always keeping a quantity of the first sponge to act as a starter. It is a good plan too, to add a small amount of yeast to keep up the life of the first sponge, or starter)."

The Costume Suit Has a Touch of Plaid

By ELEANOR GUNN

One of the most important reasons for believing that the suit is in line for popular endorsement is that the tailored suit in its various appears to have "caught on" through its own appeal. Something in the way of a cursory canvass was made among a gathering of young women who are average and typical in their observance of the mode and who have been for the most part "dress wearers."
