

A Dutch Colonial House That Is Homelike

A certain homelike quality is found in a well-designed Dutch Colonial house that appeals to most people. This type of house is quiet and dignified. It allows the owner to give his individual taste full sway in furnishing and decorating.

With the example illustrated, the Dutch roof forms the striking feature of the house and stamps the character on it.

The plan arrangement is compact and economical, yet it is most complete and gives livable, attractive interiors.

A central stairway serves all rooms in the most economical manner. The service arrangement of the first floor is very good. Here the architects have worked out a scheme that will delight the housewife. At one side of the kitchen is the entry with refrigerator iced from the entry, but with its front in the kitchen, to save steps. On the opposite side of the kitchen is arranged the pantry and the breakfast alcove. Steps to and from the dining-room have been reduced to a minimum.

A built-in ironing board is provided in the kitchen. Plenty of cupboard space is provided in both the kitchen and pantry. A toilet-room connects with the rear entry, so it is accessible from the service portion and from the living-room.

Four bedrooms, two baths and very generous closets are well laid out on the second floor. The baths are together and are over the first floor toilet-room, giving economical plumbing.

A servants' room and bath, and generous storage space are provided on the third floor.

Cost about $13,300. Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House "A-105.

CANADIAN ANNIVERSARY.

March 7th, 1791.

The Constitutional Act, separating Canada into two sections, Lower and Upper Canada, was sponsored by William Pitt, the great Earl of Chatham, who was then prime minister and who introduced the bill into the British House of Commons on this date. It came into effect a week later.

Big Profits In Smuggled Coins. Christiania, March 7. — Lured by prospects of 80 per cent. profit, smugglers recently have been active in conveying Norwegian silver currency across the border into Sweden. In due time, however, the police took steps to stop the practice and now ten men of Frederikshald are in jail, as is also a Swedish woman whose part it was to receive the coins on the Swedish side of the line.

The Scarlet Stain.

The crimson glare of the setting sun cast a strange and sinister light into the silent, room, lingering, like an accusing finger, on the dark red pool in the centre of the floor—red as the western sky itself.

Slowly the scarlet stain widened. Her hand clutched convulsively to her heart, a woman watched it, the utter extremity of fear showing in her horror-dilated eyes. Anxiety was written in every line of her face.

A jaunty step sounded without, the door swung open, and a man entered. The tune he had been whistling died on his lips, the color ebbed from his face. His eyes, wide as the woman's, were riveted on the same dread spectacle. Then suddenly, a sharp voice broke the deathly stillness.

"Don't stand there like a moon-struck calf, Henry!" exclaimed the woman. "Come here and help me to clear away this strawberry jam!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Mere Tribute

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

"Yes, my dear Mrs. Elwes, but the price has gone up to seven thousand five hundred," smiled Col. Lawrence. Mrs. Elwes stood before him dumb-founded. "You—you told me five thousand," she stammered. "Three years ago," smiled the colonel.

"I've paid you that hundred a month all the time," she faltered desperately. "Mere tribute," smiled the colonel, leaning back in his chair. "I'll take the five thousand on account and debit you with the balance."

Mrs. Elwes stood there, a pitiful figure that might have melted a heart of stone. But the colonel's heart was made of alabaster, for he was the editor of a notorious society paper which made a specialty of scandal. And there had been something in Mrs. Elwes' past life which the colonel had found out three years before.

His threat of divulging it to her husband had kept her in constant terror. Jim and she adored each other. If ever he found out he would leave her, cast her off; his anger would be terrible. She could not bear the thought of it. She had saved every penny she could scrape together to get that fatal letter that was the proof. And now the colonel had calmly raised his price 50 per cent.

She looked at him in despair. The colonel looked back at her. He didn't want to drive her too far; he had his own reasons, also an acute psychological sense which told him just how far he could go.

"I'll make it sixty-five hundred," he said, still smiling. "And that's a month until the debt is paid. Otherwise—that is to say, if I don't receive the whole amount within a month—"

"A month!" she gasped. "A month," he smiled. "Come, my dear Madam, it is an easy thing to wheedle another fifteen hundred out of that complacent husband of yours."

She bit her lip. That was the hardest thing of all to bear, the thought of having to deceive Jim, who trusted her so implicitly. "I'll do my best," she answered desperately.

"Your very best," smiled the colonel. "A nice little, juicy article that story would make, wouldn't it? And that letter would look so well in print in our columns."

"Oh, you are a brute!" sobbed Mrs. Elwes. "So many have called me," answered the colonel, bowing her out. She went out in a nightmare. She must go to Jim, lie to him again, let him think her extravagant, so long as she could wheedle another fifteen hundred out of him. She was desperately in debt, all her bills were unpaid, and the colonel had her five thousand, in bills, upon his desk.

She started violently. She had nearly collided with a tall man who was coming along the passage. And she looked at him in terror. It was her husband!

"Pussy! You here?" he exclaimed. "Why, Jim, I—"

But she could think of no lie to tell him. She had a desperate desire to blurt out everything, rather than go on enduring what had been her portion for so long.

And, staring into her husband's face, which wavered in a blur of mist, she saw his blue eyes hardening, saw a dreadful look come upon his face. "You've been to see Colonel Lawrence!"

He had her by the shoulder, tight, as in a vise, and she was sobbing desperately in the passage. "You've been in there?" "No—I—I—"

"Answer me!" "Yes, then, yes! If you must know he's got—a letter of mine, and I've been paying him blackmail for years—all your money went there—now—"

She realized with dismay that he was embracing her. His kisses fell tenderly upon her forehead. "You poor little girl, to think that you should have suffered as you have! Why, I've been paying blackmail to that scamp for years, too, so that you shouldn't know I knew. How much have you paid him?"

"Five thousand, just now—"

Her husband laughed as he entered Colonel Lawrence's office. "There must have been an earthquake in the room above," said one of the occupants of the room under the colonel's.

"Oh, I guess not," answered his friend. "Sounds like the colonel having difficulties."

Bunyan Holds Record.

"Pilgrim's Progress," next to the Bible, has been translated into more languages than any other book. The number (according to information received from the reference librarian of the New York Public Library) now exceeds 197 languages and dialects. Mr. Frank H. Mann, general secretary of the American Bible Society, says this is a remarkable record for any book, and only goes to emphasize the more remarkable record of the Bible in this respect. The Bible has been translated in part into 770 languages and dialects, more than seven times as many as John Bunyan's immortal work, which first appeared in 1678.

Declined An Office.

Some of the early customs in municipal administration in Ontario were odd enough. A Welland correspondent has discovered record of punishment of a man for not accepting an office, and in another instance, an election being overlooked, the old Council continued in office. The first is recorded in the following minutes from the records of the township of Willoughby in 1801:

"Gideon Dudley, being duly elected to the office of assessor for the township of Willoughby and Crowland, declined the said office, came before me this 14th day of March, being summoned to appear to know the reason of his not accepting said office, and he, not having just reason for declining, was fined two pounds lawful money of province, and Elijah Vincent was appointed by the magistrate in said office.—Thomas Cummings, J.P."

Apparently there was no monkey with municipal duties in that town. Mr. Cummings, who imposed the sentence, was, as well as justice of the peace, municipal clerk. Crowland and Willoughby at that time, and for five years later, were united municipally.

The second incident relates to the township of Pelham, Welland county, in the early years of last century. By some oversight the elections were not held. The old council assembled in the new year, and passed a resolution to the effect that, since the matter of the election had been overlooked, they would continue on the job for another year.

Royal Yeast Cakes reach the user in sealed air-tight waxed paper wrappers, each cake being wrapped by machinery—not by hand so that even after package has been opened, the cakes are protected from dust and other harmful contamination.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

RICH IN VITAMINES

Sunlight—for your Washing Machine

A WASHING machine is made to wash your clothes without rubbing or boiling—and it succeeds just in proportion to the value of the soap you use.

Sunlight Soap dissolves quickly and completely in hot water and works up into an abundant suds. This is very necessary so that its rich cleansing ingredients may search through and through the meshes of the clothes and dissolve the dirt and soil spots. Then, when rinsing comes, all dirt and soapy matter runs entirely away, leaving your clothes sweet, fresh and snowy clean.

Put half a cake of Sunlight into hot water in your machine and stir into generous suds. Put in the clothes and operate the machine—your clothes will be clean.

LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED TORONTO

The pure lather of Sunlight Soap cleans the clothes naturally, not chemically. The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity is stamped on every tablet of Sunlight Soap.

You Can't Beat Tanlac Says Alberta Citizen

"The Tanlac Treatment Made Me Look and Feel Like A Different Man," Says Petro.

"The Tanlac treatment has made me look and feel like a different man," is the positive statement of H. G. Petro, well known citizen of Okotoks, Alberta, Canada.

"Before taking Tanlac I was sorely troubled with indigestion, gas bloating and a tightness in my chest that made me short of breath. My appetite was gone, my circulation poor, and headaches and dizzy spells would strike me most every day. I also had a bad swelling in my leg.

"Three bottles of Tanlac put me in A-1 condition in every way. I have a rousing appetite, sleep like a log and am rid of all my troubles, even the swelling in my leg. Incidentally I have gained so much weight that I am too big for the clothes I wore before taking Tanlac, and am feeling fine. You can't beat Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

MAPLE SYRUP OPERATIONS.

Likely the Season Will Be the Best in Years.

Deseronto, March 5.—The recent thaw and mild weather has made the streets and roadways very sloppy. The farmers are hurrying large loads of logs to the saw mill here before the snow goes. Several of the farmers have started maple syrup operations, which promises to be the best for many years.

Mr. Joyce, who conducted the meat market in Mesher's old stand, on Edmund street, has sold out to George Pearson, Jr. The masquerade ball, on Monday night, in the parish hall, was a great success. Walter's orchestra, Napanea, supplied the music for dancing. The costumes were pretty and varied. Miss Mary Normile, as a Spanish lady carried off first prize, while Joseph Gould, as a gypsy, won first gent's prize.

Isaac Allum, who has carried on a furniture and undertaking business on Edmund street, has rented the big hardware store of the late John Dalton, St. George street, and moved in.
