QUEEN'S JOURNAL DINNER

A Farewell to the Present Staff and a Welcome to the New.

About fifty people sat down Tuesday evening to the first annual dinner of the Queen's University Journal staff which was given at Hambrook's, Brock street, as a farewell to the staff of 1923-24 and a welcome to the presiding workers for the coming year.

C. E. Lyght, editor-in-chief, presided, with Mr. Graham, newly elected to the position, Prof. J. F. Macdonald, George Hanson, of the firm of Hanson, Crozier & Edgar publishers, and members of the ladies' staff grouped around him at the head table. "Stubby" Holmes' orchestra provided excellent music during the courses which were of such excellence as to be fully appreciated without the use of harmony.

Toasts were proposed as follows: "The King," Mr. Lyght; "The University," proposed by John Lansbury, responded to by Prof. J. F. Macdonald; "The Ladies," proposed by Mr. Douglas, responded to by Miss Frances MacCallum; "The New Staff," proposed by Russell Smith, responded to by Mr. Graham; "Athletics," proposed by Edward Dolan, responded to by R. Graham; "The Kingston Papers," by John C. Macgillivray, responded to by Eytan Warburton, Kingston Standard, and A. C. Givens, British Whig.

Mr. Lyght, retiring editor-in-chief, concluded the evening with well chosen remarks, welcoming the new staff, wishing them success in their efforts and thanking his staff for support during the past year.

"Ardie" Abernethy, convener, and his committee, are to be congratulated on a very excellent dinner, and the Journal upon a new departure and a graceful act.

THE SPIRIT OF THE 1860's.

Kingston and Ontario Owe Much To Toronto Globe.

Miss Agnes M. Machar.

Kingston—and Ontario for that matter—owes much to Agnes Maule Machar. Many thousands of words have been written in prose and verse for the illumination of the past or the present by that gentle personality of the one-time Capital of Canada. In one of the old school readers was a poem, "Among the Thousand Islands," which introduced that scenic region to many a childish mind, just learning to appreciate nature, where "only the shadows tremble and quiver 'neath the balmy breath of a night in June."

Kingston people know Miss Machar through her long residence there and her active part in many public causes, where her keen intelligence and judgment have guided conferences and councils. The outside world may now picture her in her advancing years, as she was seen by F. L. MacCallum, who writes of her in The Canadian Magazine:

"As you go up to the door a smart shower is pelting down, and a hilarious squad of very young things, with silken ankles and 'rolled' knees, splash by. A moment later you are ushered into the 1860's. Pictures of all sorts—portraits, groups, scenes, Rock of Ages, and fruity things—crowd the parlor walls and overflow into adjoining rooms and hallways. Tables here and there carry a deckload of books, while mantelpiece and piano stagger under their burden of nicknacks and papers. And, calm amid this Victorian congestion, a tiny, old lady, whom you had all but overlooked, rises from a horse-hair chair and extends a gentleman's hand.

"You fancy a great burden of years—like in the illustrations of The Pilgrim's Progress—resting on those bowed shoulders. But when you look into her eyes, you are greeted by a spirit young and eager as your own, but so wise. Those who live in Kingston often pass that indomitable spirit hurrying the frail, worn body, clad anyhow, through storm and darkness, toward the lighted windows of some lecture hall or church. For the intellect still commands, even as it did when, as a slender girl, she spent long hours in the shadowy manse library, devouring rows of metaphysical Scottish divines or translating Bossuet's sermons for fun.

"She cannot remember when she was not writing, she says, and her first poem was completed at the joyous age of seven. It set forth the painful deaths of two young emigrants, the one from ship's fever and the other of a broken heart. Very shortly afterward a few verses, descriptive of a mother preparing tea for her family, appeared in one of the Kingston papers, probably The News.

"Yes," she answers, placidly, "I think I was rather pleased."

There have been many lines and numerous volumes since then, including her fine History of Kingston, and to-day:

"Oh, yes," she answered, as we stood at the door, "I still write. I was at my desk all morning, writing or watching the rain in the trees. And it has been pleasant talking about these books. Not many bother about them nowadays, you know."

"A passing runabout filled the old-fashioned street with its derisive bray."

LITTLE BOY CHOPPED THUMB WITH AXE

While playing with an axe at his home at Mountain Grove on Saturday, Omar, the young son of P. Gray, struck his thumb and almost completely severed it near the base of the nail.

The injury was a most painful one for the youngster, but he is doing nicely.

NATURE AT HER BEST.

Those who appreciate nature at her best and revel in a wealth of variegated scenery will find the route travelled by the Canadian National Railways between Toronto and Vancouver, one of never-to-be-forgotten beauty.

First through the inimitable lake region of Northern Ontario, skirting many placid, mirror-like lakes pocketed between tree-clad hills, catching a fleeting glimpse of many portentous, rock-strewn little waterways dashing madly towards the quiet levels of the lakes below. From Winnipeg, the fertile Prairie Provinces treat the traveller to a type of gently undulating scenery not to be seen in any other part of Canada.

The ever-changing scenery of the Canadian Rockies never grows wearisome, no matter how often it is viewed. Jasper Park, with its protected wild game and beautiful Mt. Edith Cavell; colossal Mt. Robson, gigantic slow-moving glaciers stretching from snow-clad peaks, are only a few of nature's wonders the traveller by the Canadian National Route sees before descending to the balmy climate of Vancouver and the Pacific Coast.

There are two Canadian National Trains leaving Toronto daily for the West. The "National" carrying standard sleeping car and compartment observation car departs at 10:45 p.m. Steel equipped, the "National" is luxurious in every detail. A standard sleeping car connecting with the Continental Limited, the train de luxe of the Canadian National System leaves Toronto every evening at 8:45.

Travellers to California or other points on the Pacific Coast usually take the famous scenic route through Canada because of its beauty. Excellent connections are made at Vancouver with both steamship and train.

Make reservation or get further particulars from J. P. Hawley, C.P. and T. A. C.N. Rly., Kingston, Ont. or any Canadian National ticket agent.

L. O. B. A. Event.

A very pleasant event took place in the Orange hall on Monday evening when a euchre and dance was held by the Ladies' Orange Benvolent Association. There were twenty-two tables of euchre in play, and the prizes were won by the following: First ladies' Mrs. Vanderwalker; first gentlemen's, W. H. Cadder-mole; ladies' consolation, Mrs. Le-maire; and gentlemen's consolation, D. Wood. Novelty hats were worn by the ladies during the dance. Great praise is due the committee consisting of Mrs. J. Berry, convener; Mrs. W. K. Wood, and Mrs. G. Burk. The orchestra furnished excellent music.

By lowering the tax rate the city council of 1924 has started something that will give future councils food for thought.

Resolved, that we need a new hotel. Question: "How are we going to get it?"

Kingston does not take a back seat by any means when it comes to making a sale of her bonds. City Treasurer Barriels' statement at the civic finances is a most encouraging one.

Good evening, have you bought your 1924 Ontario Motor license marker?

St. Patrick's Day passed off very quietly in Kingston with no complaints about husbands declaring themselves for home rule.

If the O. T. A. is ousted, what line will the "bootleggers" follow?

An Ottawa magistrate has given the answer to the question asked so many times in police court, "When is a man drunk?" The Ottawa cad says that a man is under the influence of liquor when he does things he would not do in his sober senses.

Several Chinamen at St. Catharines were arrested for playing Ma-jongg for money. Why not let them gamble their money on their own game?

It has been suggested that all auto drivers undergo an eye test. How about a breath test too?

The other day we stated that Jack Dempsey would put the necessary "punch" into the movies. Now his press agent says he is a regular "knockout."

The "lemon kings" are now mixing their drinks. One who came before the police magistrate this week stated that he had been mixing his lemon with grape juice. There should be no kick about this.

Talking about coal, citizens will have no objection to using Alberta coal, so long as it is good and the price is reasonable.

POSTAL CLERKS OBJECT

To Government Proposal to Cut Off Their Bonus.

The civil servants in Kingston are up in arms over the fact that the Dominion government proposes to make a cut in the cost-of-living bonus. The local men feel that the proposed cut is not justified, as the cost of living has not decreased very much.

At a mass meeting of the local branch of the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association, the members by a unanimous vote went on record as being opposed to the cut, and decided to send the following telegram to Dr. A. E. Ross, M.P.

"At a mass meeting held in Kingston, Postal Clerks urgently request your influence for an immediate upward revision of salaries to replace the bonus."

The Dominion Government proposes to make the following changes—"The cost-of-living bonus for those receiving a salary of over $1,200, up to $1,560, is to be cut 50 per cent, and where the salary is over $1,560 the bonus is to be discontinued. Salaries up to $1,200 will receive full bonus, as heretofore."

Immigration returns for the calendar year 1923 show that the number of arrivals from the continent of Europe more than doubled that in 1922.

Winter conditions having been favorable, predictions are now being made that there will be a good peach crop in the Niagara peninsula this year.
