AMUSEMENTS
 What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

"HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND" STARTING AT THE CAPITOL
 "Her Temporary Husband," a First National farce comedy, opens a three-day run at the Capitol theatre to-day.
 The mission of "Her Temporary Husband" is evidently to provoke laughter, to cure the blues and to take one away from the usual monotony of every day life. And it fills its mission one hundred per cent.
 The picture provokes laughter—lasting laughter. Unlike most comedy features it is something more than a hodge-podge of "gas." It tells a story, based on a well-founded plot, unusual it is true, but nevertheless plausible and convincing.
 It would spoil the enjoyment of those planning to see the picture to outline the whole plot; it is so uproariously funny.
 The picture passes quickly from laugh to laugh, growing in intensity to a real explosive finish. Any one who fails to laugh at and with "Her Temporary Husband" is like the proposed bridegroom, a fit candidate for the undertaker.
 Owen Moore is ideally cast in the character of "Tom Burton," the "temporary husband."
 Sidney Chaplin, brother of the famous Charles, is right at home as a laugh producer in the role of "Julius," a lugubrious butler. Sylvia Bremer is charming, too, as "the girl in the case."

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD" IN THE WORLD
 Beginning to-day the Strand theatre will offer its patrons the film version of George M. Cohan's famous stage success, "The Meanest Man in the World," a First National release.
 Those whose pleasure it has been to witness private showings of "The Meanest Man in the World," claim it to be one of the outstanding features of the year. There is a laugh in every foot of the six reels and patrons of the theatre should prepare themselves for one of the finest attractions of the season.

MURRELL LOSES APPEAL AND GOES TO GALLOWES

There Was No Miscarriage of Justice, the Divisional Court Decides.
 Toronto, March 20.—The second divisional court at Osgoode Hall, after hearing argument by J. M. Donahue, representing Sydney Ernest Murrell, this morning, without calling upon Deputy Attorney-General Edward Bayley, K.C., dismissed Murrell's appeal from sentence of death imposed by Justice Lennox on February 9th, following the verdict of the jury.
 "Even assuming," said Chief Justice Latchford, "that attitude of the trial judge was that this was murder or nothing else, the learned judge instructed the jury that the final findings on the facts were for them and not for him."
 Justice Masten added that there had been no miscarriage of justice.
 Murrell with Henry "Slim" Williams, was found guilty of the murder of Russell Campbell at Melbourne, Ont., in April, 1921. The date of the execution was fixed for April 10th.
 Clarence Topping, found guilty of murdering Geraldine Durston, in November of last year, at London, was also sentenced by Justice Lennox to die on the same date.

OBJECT TO ADDITIONAL INCOME TAX EXEMPTION

St. Thomas is the Only Place That is in Favor of the Bill
 Toronto, March 20.—Nearly all cities in Ontario were represented before the municipal committee of the legislature this morning and the opposed bill introduced by F. C. McBrien (South West Toronto) increasing the exemption on income tax assessment for householders from $2,000 to $2,500 and for non-householders from $1,000 to $1,250.
 The St. Thomas city council representative was the only one who said he had been instructed to support the bill. St. Thomas council would exempt personal earnings up to $2,500. The McBrien bill does not distinguish between personal and other earnings.
 The committee on a vote of 21 to 14 referred the bill to the special committee which is to consolidate and bring the assessment and municipal acts up to date.
 The decision of the committee means that the bill is dead for one year at least.

ROAD PAVING APPEALS

By Owners of Corner Lots—Judge Lavell Reserves One Decision.
 Judge Lavell was called upon Thursday morning to decide upon two interesting cases in regard to Local Improvement charges. M. S. McFarlane, who owns property at the corner of Earl and Albert streets, appealed against the Court of Revision decision that he could not receive a reduction on his Albert street frontage for road paving until paving was also done on his Earl street frontage. The statute provides that a reduction is to be made for corner lots in respect to local improvements, and the custom of Kingston and many other municipalities is to charge on two-thirds of the total frontage. Mr. McFarlane has 44 feet on Earl street, and 85 feet on Albert street, the latter being paved.
 A. E. Day, acting for the appellant, contended that according to the law in case of a corner lot when there are local improvement charges that become a burden on the property owner, the city was called upon to give a reduction of one-third of the total frontage on both streets. In other words it would mean that the owner would only pay for two-thirds of the total frontage on both streets. He contended that a reduction should be made at once.
 Mr. Rigney stated he did not disagree on that, but the custom had been in Kingston when a pavement was built on a street the owners of property who reside on the corners, as Mr. McFarlane does, would pay the total cost of the local improvement on one street and then when the other street front was paved he would receive a reduction of one-third of the total frontage on both streets.
 City Engineer Howard Dick stated that this is the policy he has been following for some years and other cities were doing likewise. Judge Lavell stated that although it might have been the practice, the act distinctly stated that a reduction "shall be made" and does not state that the owner shall wait until both streets are paved, or have local improvements upon them.
 Although Judge Lavell did not commit himself, when reserving his decision, he intimated that he thought that some reduction should be made. Mr. Rigney stated that if the reduction were made it would be paying less in proportion to his length of pavement than the other people nearby. Judge Lavell stated that when the Earl street work was done the matter could be readjusted.
 T. J. Lockart who owns a triangular lot, claimed that his local improvement assessment was too large, and when the map of the lot was studied by the two lawyers and the judge, it was decided to recommend that the assessment be reduced by one-third.

His brother was just coming toward him at the time and received the bullet through his heart.

SPLIT BAMBOO

The old March wind was made for kite-flying. One of these fine, it is, that's been used in scientific invention and construction. The first kites were made by Chinese boys thousands of years ago for play things. They had the best sort of materials—light-weight bamboo and rice paper, which they prepared with flying fish and red dragon Kite-flying was a favorite amusement of the Japanese and Hindus a long time ago.
 Coming down to the present day, we find that Benjamin Franklin used a kite to prove that lightning is electricity. A kite string carried the first wire across Niagara Falls for the erection of a suspension bridge, then a heavier wire was drawn across by the lighter one, and a heavier one still by that, until a cable spanned the river. Kites have been used for opening up communication channels and compassing points, using the kite line to draw up a heavy cable. Kites have even been used for meteorological observations.
 Follow the directions given and your kite will be a successful one. May it fly long and high!
 The simpler kites of the smaller sizes, that is, two feet and under, should be made first. Kites, you know, are very delicate to construct and balance, but not too hard if the boy (or girl, too, for that matter) uses care. Experience with a small kite will enable you to make larger and more complicated forms later on.
 The object to strive after is the greatest degree of lightness possible, plus strength and balance. Sticks that are light enough to use are spruce, tamarack, Norway pine, red cedar, white pine and elm. They should be cut of a thickness which is about one-third of the kite length. Cedar and spruce, particularly bend well. For the cover use wood, tough tissue paper, or better, if it is possible to find it, rice paper from a Japanese or Chinese shop. Brown wrapping paper does very well also.
 Notice in the diagrams that very few sticks are used. They are stiff and strong, though, and the kite string and tail are arranged so that the kite will balance. Kite sticks are weakened by nailing or tacking, except on very large ones, so you must lash them securely instead. If you glue them and tie them as well, your kite joints are doubly secure.
