MOTHERS

And Their Children

Right and Wrong-

One Mother Says: I never tell my children that they must not do a thing because "it would make mother feel badly" if they do, but give them a logical reason why they must not do it. I have taken "because mother says" out of my vocabulary. We do not teach children to walk because it makes us tired to carry them, and neither should children think that right and wrong is a thing arbitrarily decided by mother's convenience.

THE LITTLE BLUE BOOKS.

By Helen MacMurchy, M.D. The Ottawa Department of Healt has issued still another set "Little Blue Books" written by the friend of the Canadian child, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Chief of the Division of Child Welfare, who has already told the young mother many things of value. While this set contains "How to take care of Baby," and "How to take care of Children," Dr. MacMurchy goes further and tells us many things about the kind of house in which to bring up the Canadian baby into a healthy contented boy or girl. Not of necessity Mrs. T. D. Minnes, Mensington a large or expensive house, but avenue, was one of Friday's tea house capable of being made into a home. as well as useful.

The last issue of The Canadian Farmer has the following article and a front page cut of Geoffrey O' Hara, whose mother is Mrs. Robert O'Hara, William street, and whose grandfather was the late Rev. F. W. Dobbs, rector of St. John's church.

Portsmouth. "With an Irish father and an Irish-Canadian mother, Geoffrey O'-Hara began life with song in his heart. Later it found its way out to Bronxville, N.Y., to visit Dr. and his lips and then, later still, he began to write down the music that Coffee sang through his being, and now it is sung across several continents. He's a young man yet, but for years, now, concert programmes have carried the name "O'Hara." "There h No Death" that sustained sonorous, reverential, melody, spoke with triumphant certainly to a world torn by the teeth of war. "K-k-k-Katie" caught the troops, and Allenby's army was not the only one that marched to its lilting nonsense.

"I'm glad to have written the song that took Jerusalem," he said the other day, in the midst of a delightful speech to the Empire Club Miss Bellhouse, Montreal, and of Toronto, a speech in which he its promoters with his gifted Irish tongue; while at the same time he poured out all the eloquence at his command on the beauty and the value of folk music and its need for the development of any nation,

Mr. O'Hara was born in Chatham. Ont., is tall and handsome, with plenty of golden hair, which, (being one of the younger school of músicians) he keeps cropped quite short. He sings his own songs and many other songs, in a satisfying baritone, and with restraint and feeling-a happy combination. An other unusual gift is his keen sense of the value of words, a sense that compels him to write music not for its sound alone, but also for its suit ability. This is in a great measure responsible for the popularity of his songs. His most recent triumph occurred at the Mendelssohn Choir concerts in Toronto, when his "Anny Laurie" brought an enthusiastic recall, and following this, the young composer was compelled to rise to his feet in the box where he was sitting and acknowledge the plaudi's of the vast audience. When next you see Geoffrey O'-Hara's name on song or programme. don't forget he is a true Canadian, and when you sing his music, or when it is sung to you, notice how he has caught into it something of the far spaces of his native land; something of the clear skies and the bracing life of the North; something of the high courage and the quick "catch at laughter" that distinguish the Canadian-born and withal something of the mystic faith that comes to him from Erin, where the soul of music is embrodied."

Woman In Public Life. Mrs. Nellie McClung speaking at the Liberal Women's Club had some amusing things and practical, to say on the subject of the everyday woman called to wider duties for the State. Such a woman, she said would not economize on the health of the people, or in the matter actual necessities, to any class ceiving state aid, or in the matter of education. "A Methodist minister's wife whom I know has already moved 27 times and raised six children; and been president of the Ladies' Aid. Can anyone believe that if would bother her to move a resolution or to raise a point of order? A woman who can take her summer hat and cover the straw with velves and put back the trimming with a dab of fur, and make it into a winter hat, more beautiful in its second reincarnation that it was in its first, surely she could put a bill through its second reading. The old question was often raised: Will women want to sit in Parliament? Anna Howard Shaw used to say that camp now being held in Ontario women had stood at the ironing Hall is quite worth while. About board for so long, and bent so long fifty girls and women are to be over washing, that they would be found there in the evening under glad to sit anywhere.
