CAPITOL VAUDEVILLE BILL PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

Dwan and Murray Presenting Pleasing Piano and Vocal Number. The best part of the programme running the last three days of the week at the Capitol is undoubtedly the vaudeville act of Dwan and Murray, the name under which two charming young ladies entertain with vocal and piano selections. High class, polite, and pleasing are only three of the adjectives which might be used to describe it. "Black Oxen" in the production is all right, but the plot of the picture is nothing to go into raptures over. Gertrude Atherton has perpetrated some fantastic yarns and this is one of them. A woman of sixty is rejuvenated for the sake of her country and finds herself as beautiful as twenty once more. She leaves her aged-sweetheart in Austria and comes to America to raise money for the "cause" (there's always a "cause") but falls in love with handsome Leo Clayvering in the process. However, the American flapper won out eventually and the "old" resurrected bag of bones' went back to her Austria. The mystery is why her white-haired old lover did not do the rejuvenation stunt also and even things up, but evidently Gertrude Atherton does not approve of rejuvenating men. The same programme will be shown to-night and Saturday.

"HOODMAN BLIND" IS FILLED WITH ACTION

Few recent pictures, or for that matter, few of any vintage at all, are as replete with action, naturally done and well photographed, as the William Fox screen version of "Hoodman Blind," from the noted old stage play of a generation ago. Gladys Hulette has the dual role played at Wallack's in New York by Anne Robie, and David Butler has the part opposite her which was played by Wilson Barrett, co-author of the stage piece. The marine scenes, showing an actual shipwreck, together with others of thrillingly realistic fights, are exceptionally. "Hoodman Blind" playing the Strand theatre to-day.

MRS. ANDREW MILLER Passed Away in Picton on Saturday Last.

Picton Times. Mrs. Andrew Miller passed away Saturday evening, at her home on Owen street, Picton, in her eighty-third year. March 29th, the date of her death, was the sixtieth anniversary of her marriage with Andrew Miller who predeceased her six years. Mrs. Miller, whose maiden name was Eliza Harrison Graham, was the teacher in Rev. William Macaulay's parochial school, both before and after her marriage. For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Miller were in charge of the orphanage at Kingston.

About thirty years ago they returned to their old home in Picton. At Kingston they provided in their own living compartment for two of the home boys. The more delicate lad of the pair they brought to Picton with them. Under their tender care the lad, Jimmie Miller, grew to manhood, remaining with his parents by adoption, until his death some fifteen years ago. The other lad, Alex Davis, now a prominent citizen of Winnipeg, has honored his foster parents since childhood. Few parents have been blessed with more loyal sons. The life-long attachment of these boys to their foster parents conveys an idea of the character of the deceased that words would fail to portray.

There are still a few residing in Picton who attended Mrs. Miller's school and cherish pleasant recollections of her kindness and patience as a teacher.

Mrs. Frank Hornbrook of Kingston, is Mrs. Miller's only surviving sister. Mrs. Susan Elliott, a sister-in-law, has resided with Mrs. Miller for a number of years.

Rev. John Lyons of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene was the officiating clergyman. Since her youth Mrs. Miller had been a devout member of this church. The minister bears his remarks on the 23rd Psalm. Mrs. Robert Sayers sang that grand old hymn, "Rock of Ages."

The remains were laid beside those of her husband and son in the church yard of the old church of St. Mary Magdalene, within a few feet of the building in which she had taught school in her youth. The pall bearers, with the exception of one, had all attended Mrs. Miller's school. They were: Nelson Ballie, James Brown, Samuel Shaw, Samuel Welsh, Fred Brown, Owen Jones.

LECTURES AT QUEEN'S.

Delivered by Prof. H. F. Stewart, of Dalhousie. On Tuesday evening, in Convocation Hall, Prof. H. F. Stewart, Dalhousie University, gave a very interesting lecture on some recent tendencies in biography and auto-biography. The speaker especially emphasized the work of Strachey and Mrs. Aquilina in her recent memoirs. Strachey's idea was to give this subject a quite different view than it recently had and although many people differed as to these views, still they had their place. Prof. Stewart, in commenting on Mrs. Aquilina's memoirs, pointed out that while they were bitter in several aspects and were frowned upon by critics, they provided a veritable source of information along historical lines for future generations.

On Friday afternoon in the new arts building, Prof. Stewart continued his series of lectures, the subject being "The Need for Modern Casuality." "Yardley Refills," Gibson's.

THRIFT IN U. S. SCHOOLS NOW ACCOMPLISHED FACT

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift. It is a matter of public interest that marked progress has been made during the school year now drawing to a close in the matter of thrift education. In all parts of the country both urban and rural, schools are introducing thrift in their curricula.

These results have come after eight years of research and industry upon the part of the Committee on Thrift Education of the National Council of Education. The chairman of this committee recently reported a wide-spread and growing interest in thrift education by schools throughout the nation.

It is to the credit of this committee that definite and concrete courses of study have been mapped out which are receiving practical application. In other words, thrift in the schools has arrived. From now on, year after year, the work will grow in results. More and more schools will take it up, and a substantial foundation thus will be laid for thrift practices by future generations.
