What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

"THY NAME IS WOMAN"

AND VAUDEVILLE AT CAPITOL With a highly-charged story of passionate love, a background of great scenic beauty, played by a cast of stars and made by one of the industry's cleverest directors, "Thy Name is Woman," which comes to the Capitol Theatre for three days, beginning today, promises to be one of the most thrilling productions of the year. The cast includes such favorites as Ramon Novarro, Barbara La Marr, Edith Roberts, William V. Mong, Wallace Macdonald, Robert Edson and Claire MacDowell. The picture is taken from Karl Schoenherr's stage play, the American version of which (by Benjamin Glazer) had a very successful run on Broadway last season, with Mary Nash and Jose Rubens in the principal roles. Advance reports on the production declare it to be wonderfully effective in the power and dramatic scope of its various love interests. The story is centred around the beautiful young wife of an old smuggler in the Spanish Pyrenees. A dashing young soldier is sent to make love to her and thus find the key that will lead to the capture of the crafty bandit. The call of youth prevails and the officer and the wife actually fall in love, causing jealousy in the hearts of three other characters. The development from this premise forms an absorbing tale of revenge, thrilling action, and final solution, that is said to keep spectators peeped with excitement. An exceptionally good act is promised for the last half of the week in the O'Brien Sisters and Company three clever people who sing, dance and present many musical novelties. This act has the personal endorsement of Manager Smithies who saw it in Toronto.

"A WOMAN'S WOMAN"

HAS SPLENDID CAST Seldom do motion picture enthusiasts find such an all-star cast as that in the Charles Giblyn production, "A Woman's Woman," which is announced as the feature attraction coming to the Grand tonight, Friday and Saturday, and certain it is that theatre goers are in for a rare treat from the first to the very end of this picture.

In the first place there is Mary Alden in the leading feminine role. That in itself is almost enough, but when it is explained that Miss Alden will be seen at her very best in her very own type of character, the quality of the entertainment is made doubly certain.

In her support are such widely known and popular film players as Louise Lee and Dorothy MacKall, who portray the two young daughters of the heroine? Holmes E. Herbert and Albert Hackett, in the respective roles of husband and son. Others in the cast are Rob La Rosque, Horace James and Cleo Madison. The last named is one of the real emotional stars of the screen, and in "A Woman's Woman" plays the role of the elocutionist-widow who so readily "understands" the philandering husband of the heroine who has reached what some people term the "dangerous age of forty" and is doing his very best to conceal the fact from eyes himself. Donald Hall and J. Barney Sherry are also in the cast, the former in the role of gentlemanly villain and the latter as the dignified United States Senator. An added attraction, the international comedy favorite Max Linder in his supreme burlesque "The Three Must Get-Theres."

OWEN MOORE AT STRAND.

How an American engineer masquerading as an Oriental is mistaken through a strange case of resemblance to a Chinese overlord and placed in the powerful position of the mandarin is being dramatically unfolded in the First National screen version of "Thundergate" at the Strand theatre to-day.

The plot reaches a highly dramatic pitch when the pretty slave-bride of the real Lord of Thundergate is brought before him and he learns that she is a white girl who has been abducted by the Chinese. He finds, however, a happy way of solving these problems.

Owen Moore plays the role of the masquerading engineer, while Virginia Brown Faire is to be seen as the slave wife.
