THE CHANGELESS EMPIRE

WRITTEN FOR THE WHIG BY ARTHUR HUNT CHUTE.

To hear certain alarmists, during the last political upheaval in the United Kingdom, was to imagine that a Labor government would mean the end of Britain.

Ramsay MacDonald came to power, but Britain's bugles, at reveille, still echo round the world.

Socialists and Laborites are in the seats of the mighty at St. Stephen's, but the Union Jack flies on at Bermuda, Gibraltar, Malta and Hong Kong.

After the break-up of the last conference between Poincare and Lloyd George, the outlook seemed hopeless.

In a panicky world, with the franc plunging downward, and ever downward, France has been like one beset on every hand by tempest and by raging sea.

Referring to our foreign policy with France, we may in truth declare, "Where Britain was, she is." Ministers may come and go.

To-night, I hear the "last post" sounding in one of our far-flung garrisons. "The British Empire is shifting and changing," they tell us.

alleged championship of the industrial and moneyed interests and because of Premier Smuts' iron hand in quelling the Rand insurrection which developed from the big strike of miners two years ago.

The South African party or the Government party, is a fusion of the progressive Dutch party led by General Smuts as the political successor of General Botha, and the British group, led by Sir Thomas Smartt, Minister of Agriculture in the Smuts Government, the title of the South African party being adopted.

The South African party has had to fight an alliance of the Nationalists and the Labor party continuously since General Smuts' accession to power, and now this alliance is closer than ever by reason of the pact referred to.

When the new parliament met after the election of 1921 the South African party had 74 representatives; the Nationalist party, 46; the Labor party, 13 and there was one Constitutional Democrat.

THE BATTLE AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS.

The Way Is Plain—Half-Hearted Measures Are Fatal—Prevention a Certainty—Neglect Is Criminal.

Don't be waiting to see what others do. Act and think for yourself. Every man and woman know, even if they refuse to realize the awful danger of tuberculosis.

With so large an amount of time and space now given to the problem of tuberculosis there is great danger that the discussion become a mass of technicality, and the real end and object be overlooked.

Most will agree, leaving aside the matter of diagnostic clinics and sanatoria for the present, that the essentials for probable cure or restored usefulness are, rest, good food, fresh air, sunshine and, not least, freedom from worry.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE DALROY

On "Antiques." How SOME WOMEN love OLD THINGS; Old FURNITURE, old FINERY, Old LOVE-LETTERS. And how SOME MEN love Their old PIPES, old COATS, Old CRONIES, The DIFFERENCE Between MEN and WOMEN and their Love for old things, seems to be That MEN only stick to things That STILL give them PLEASURE; But WOMEN often want to stick To ANY OLD THING that HAS Given them pleasure. It takes a BRAVE WOMAN To DISCARD, or else A young and THOUGHTLESS one. Some women's LIVES seem Like their LIVING ROOMS, A collection of ODDS and ENDS Picked up at RANDOM And jumbled together; For it's ONLY when a woman knows OBJECTS of ART from OBJECTS of ARTIFICE, and GENUINE ANTIQUES from "Real antiques MADE TO ORDER" That she knows ENOUGH To throw out the WORST To make room for the BEST.
