What Happened Years Ago.
Edward Stephens, Campbellford, aged ninety-four years, has been telling about the weather. Sixty-five years ago Mr. Stephens recalls that there was a heavy frost in June that nipped the fall wheat, which was the farmers' staple crop at that time. It was feared that the wheat on the low land, which suffered most, was entirely destroyed, but in the end, it turned out better than that on the high land which was comparatively uninjured. The growth of the former was retarded, the straw was short but the grain was well filled. The high land wheat was destroyed by the weevil.
