THE FOUNDING OF WESTBROOK.

The Obituary of James Powley, 1783-1838.

Of special concern to those interested in the history of this district and to the residents of the Westbrooke neighborhood is the obituary notice of the Rev. James Powley, now a valued possession of his grandson, Alexander Riskey, of Barriemfield. It appears to be a page torn from a small book, yellow but quite legible save where the upper corners have decayed.

The father of this James Powley emigrated from Holland to the American colonies, perhaps about 1770. There are stories in their family of how they lived in terror of the Indians who passed along the adjoining trail. When bands of them were heard in the distance the mother would hide with her children in the surrounding woods until quietness and safety were restored. It seems probable that fire-water, secured at the settlement, had much to do both with this unusual audibility of the Indians and with the alarm it caused the lonely family.

Though a Dutchman, he must have remained loyal to England and, like a few others of his countrymen, turned his back on Republican America. But just previous to this he is believed to have spent three years in captivity among the Indians. During this period he was compelled to travel so far and fast that he became exhausted. On lying down to drink at a stream he found himself too feeble to rise. The Indians would have scalped him on the spot, rather than be delayed by a sick prisoner, but a squaw intervened and saved him. At the end of three years they were paid a bounty of ransom and liberated him.

"James Powley," as the obituary states, "was born in or about the year 1783, on the banks of Lake Ontario, where the town of Oswego now stands, under no other covering than the broad canopy of heaven, while his parents were emigrating to the wilds of Canada." The tradition is that the party landed at McGuin's Point—now the home of Mr. Anthony McGuin Rankin, M.P.P. Powley secured a grant of some 400 acres traversed by a stream of sufficient volume to turn a mill, and there, in time, he established the saw-mill around which grew up the village of Westbrook. Slab City was its title in those days, later toned down to First Town. In addition to the mill, the old gentleman erected a considerable brewery.

But his son James did not follow in his footsteps. "After living without hope and without God in the world for nearly 36 years, he was happily emancipated from the thrall-dom of sin and brought to enjoy the liberty of the children of God. Very soon after his conversion his ardent desire to the salvation of others prompted him zealously and unremittingly to engage in calling sinners to repentance." And it must be remembered that the Methodist church was, at the time, doubly obnoxious, both as an American institution, directed and governed from the States, and as being in opposition to the established Church of Canada. The lucrative brewery business was closed, testifying to the earnestness of James' profession.

After proving his value as an exhorter, according to the account, he was promoted to the rank of local preacher. In four years more he was fully ordained, and accepted by the conference held at Yonge street as an itinerant preacher. In 1835 he was ordained elder and appointed delegate to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, held at Cincinnati.

His death was caused by "the quick consumption—occasioned by his having been thrown from a horse and his excessive labors on the circuit." He had preached at Farmersville (Athens), when he became seriously ill. Though he returned to within three miles of his house, he could not complete the ride, and appears to have died without seeing his family. The remains were interred at Waterloo (Catawqui) burying ground, February 27th, 1838.

His daughter-in-law was the famous "Granny Powley" of Westbrooke, whose herbal remedies were sought by many and always given free. She gave the site for the Methodist church still in use there, the cornerstone of which enclosed an iron box containing the names of those who subscribed towards its erection.

In addition to this clipping there is in Mr. Riskey's possession an iron kettle which, to the best of his knowledge, was brought over by the Powleys from Holland previous to the revolution and was carried by them in their wanderings.

Mr. Riskey referred incidentally to the commonly accepted reason why the Grand Trunk failed to touch Bath, a town of very considerable importance in the fifties. The land in the neighborhood was owned by a Mr. Davy who, when asked his price for a station-site, held out for an impossible sum. Meanwhile, a certain Mr. Link, who owned a mill and four acres of land over a mile to the north-east of the town, offered the surveyors a free site on condition that they would locate a permanent station there. So Link's Mills became Ernestown and Bath was left lamenting.

A Song of Departure.

Beat the drum and sound the tubs,
Dance the can-can, pat the juba,
Kiss me, Kid, I'm off for Cuba,
Me for the tropical sun.

Blow the bugle, wave the banner,
Ring the bell and shout hosanna,
Oh you Cuba! Hey, Havana!
Land of the Mid-day Sun!

When a man marries he expects the girl to give up the whole world.
When a girl marries she expects the man to give her the whole world.

Jingle-Jangles.

Any funny, nonsensical rhyme that will make Fun shop
readers laugh is a Jingle-Jangle. It must be in two lines.
For example:

1
After winter comes the spring;
Tonalsis hurl like everything.
2
Cows have horns and sheep
have wool;
Dentists have a lot of pull.
You will undoubtedly contribute funnier Jingle-Jangles than these. Address them separately to Jingle-Jangle Department, The Fun Shop, 116 West 40th street, New York City.

A Fervent Wish.

Grandma was always cold in the big house, reports Mrs. Estella M.
Harris, even when the warm fires burned brightly. Little Betty was sorry for her dear Grandma!
That night, when Betty said her prayers, she paused, and in a tender, pleading little voice, finished with:
"And O, dear God, please make it hot for Grandma."

HEARD IN A ROADSTER.

He.
You are heavy, oh my darling,
And your weight will spoil my press.

She.
Well, you see the auto's crowded
And I'm also in distress.

He.
We might have caught a passing car
And so been saved from this sad plight.

She.
It was kind of them to take us—
Oooh!—that bump! please hold me tight!

He.
You are fretful, oh my darling
When you raised up such a fuss.

Be content, you are honored
With much more than is your just.

She.
There are men who'd give a million
For the chance with which you're blessed;—
Hold me tighter, won't you, darling?
And forget about your press!
—Poison Ivy.

Fire From a Defective Chimney.

Odessa, May 26.—The home of Fred Benjamin, about two and one-half miles from here, was completely destroyed by fire last Monday afternoon, along with the contents. Mr.
Benjamin was working in his garden and Mrs. Benjamin was at a neighbor's when the fire started. The building being frame, and the high wind made it impossible to extinguish the flames. They think the cause was a defective chimney.

She Found Them Very Satisfactory

Saskatchewan Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills for Dropsy and Diabetes

Mrs. P. Shaw says Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly doing her good.
Weyburn, Sask., May 26 (Special).
—That Dropsy and Diabetes are caused by weak kidneys and that the right way to treat them is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills is again shown by the experience of Mrs. P. Shaw, a well-known and highly respected resident of this place.

"I suffered from Dropsy and Diabetes. My back and head used to ache, and I always felt tired and nervous. My limbs swelled and I was depressed and low spirited.

I have taken Dodd's Kidney Pills during the winter. Twenty boxes in all, and they are doing me a lot of good. I have found them very satisfactory."

Mrs. Shaw's ailments were caused by weak kidneys failing to do their work of straining the impurities out of the blood.
Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not heal and strengthen weak kidneys.
