WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE MORNING?

(An epitome of Life).

F.M.D. in Mail and Empire.

Morning.

Watchman, what of the morning?

"Dense are the shadows on vale and hill,

I see no stars and the air is chill;

No sounds I hear save the lulling rill

And the Shepherd's ceaseless warning."

What is the Shepherd saying?

"He calls to the sheep in the vale below,

To the flocks that roam where the waters flow,

For He notes the dawn where the peaks are aglow,

And He fears for the young ones playing."

Noon.

Watchman, what of the morning?

"The sun shines forth and the shadows flee,

The sky is as clear as a sky can be,

There is tumult of life over land and sea,

For joy at the world's adorning."

Is the faithful Shepherd calling?

"His voice, in the noise of the noon-tide hour

Sounds low and lorn of its early power;

Men heed it best when the dark clouds lour,

Or when silence of eve is falling."

Night.

Watchman, what of the morning?

"It has passed to the realm of forgotten things,

Passed as a bird on pulsating wings,

Gone with its sorrows, its joys and its stings, its folly, its fear and its scoring.

Once more are the shadows blending, The sheep are gathered from wood and wold,

Save those, who, astray on the mountains cold, Are pining in vain for the guarded fold

And the Shepherd's careful tending.

AUNT HET

"I reckon there ain't no denyin' that women has less sense than men. A man has sense enough to marry a woman, and a woman ain't got no more sense than to marry a man."

Havelock is Searched.

Peterboro, May 29.—Only the good work of the Havelock chemical engine and the Canadian Pacific hose saved many buildings in the village on Tuesday, when O. A. Patterson's bake shop was burned.

What it is moulds the life of man?

The weather; What makes some black and others tan?

The weather; What makes the Zulu live in trees

And Congo natives dress in leaves

While others go in furs and freeze?

The Editor Hears

That the Kingston historical pageant committee is a large and representative one and each sub-committee has power to add to its numbers.

The warm air of Wednesday encouraged people to forget their woes and look forward to summer.

That Toronto's Local Council of Women, consisting of nearly fifty of the leading feminine organizations,

That the white sails of several dinghies sailing about the harbor on Wednesday reminded the citizens

That tennis is being played at the Country Club where the lilacs will soon be in blossom.

That the Cataragui Golf and Country Club was much admired by the visiting chemists

That the ladies' field day on June 5th, promises to be a pleasant affair.
