Questions. 1. With the bases filled, the ball is hit on the ground to the third baseman, who, after getting it, touches third base, then throws to the catcher. The ball beats the runner coming from third. The catcher merely touches home plate with the ball in his possession. A contends the runner is safe, that he must be touched with the ball to be retired that he could have gone back to third if he could have reached it before being touched with the ball. B contends the runner is out at the plate, claiming he was forced off, regardless of how the previous outs were made. Who is right?-H. S. ball to first baseman. Runner on touches the base, retiring the batssecond baseman, who touches the in the dispute. bag, not the runner. Has a double play been made? Has the runner the right to return to first base if he can make it safely?-E. J. M.

MR, N. ALTROCK.

Despite severe and stylish opposition from the Phillies as a team, Mr. Altrock stands out as the most comical thing in baseball kimonos.

Old timers tell you that Booth was a knockout as a tragedian, but moderns remember that it was Chaplin, the comic, who signed the first million dollar contract.

Old Nick would look as out of place in the box to-day as a house apron in Peggy Joyce's suite, but he's still more important than a clue in a murder mystery.

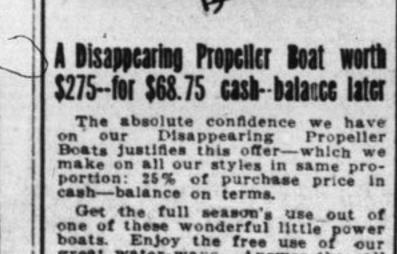

Nick works on the snappy theory that a dumbbell's laugh gets more circulation than an intellectual's Sept. 2-Civil Service vs. Tanners Irish birth, descent or residence. groan.

They pay Judge Landis $42,500 a year to dignify baseball. Altrock gets a whole lot less for burlesquing it. Still you never hear little Johnny pleading with pop to take him out to see the Judge.

Nick went from pitching to clowning and there's a double-breasted sermon in that. No guy ever went from clowning to pitching-or to the the fans because he is a powder-puff bosa' job.

Nick is getting more jack as a jester than he did as a star with the White Sox. . . . Remember that pregnate clouds, hover o'er our heads the next time you see a simpleton will melt into fruitful showers of making goo-goo eyes at a coy squir- blessings on the people.

For a team of discards the Red Sox seem to be doing pretty nicely. But as Mr. O'Goofty says it is not hard to pick a winning hand from the discards if you know the game, and Lee Fohl apparently knows the game.
