TWO NURSES NEEDED FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Inspector Stuart's Interesting Report Made to the Board of Education.

At a meeting of the Board of Education held on Thursday evening the following interesting report by Inspector J. Russell Stuart on the appointment of an assistant nurse for the schools was read by Trustee T. G. Bishop, chairman of the management committee:

"That the physical condition of our public school pupils has greatly improved through the activities of the school nurse is obvious to anyone who has had opportunities of observing conditions before and since the nurse was appointed, but one nurse is clearly unequal to the requirements of the situation. During the past eight months she has examined 2,493 pupils. At this rate she will meet each pupil, on an average, only once annually. Eight hundred and seven cases of physical defects were discovered, sufficiently serious to be reported to the parents. Many of these defects were of a nature to affect seriously the health and development of the children, as well as their progress in school. Among the defects reported were 49 cases of defective vision, 72 of defective nasal breathing, 104 of defective tonsils. In 353 cases the attention of parents was directed to dental defects and there were also 268 cases of contagious disease.

"These statistics indicate only part of the field which health work in the schools should cover, but is sufficient to prove that it is beyond the powers of one nurse to accomplish what ought to be done. To detect and report physical defects to the parents is sufficient in many cases to lead to remedial action, but there are many cases of great urgency in which, for various reasons, nothing is done. One of the most necessary duties of the nurse is to follow up her recommendations effectively. To do this there must be sufficiently frequent re-examination of the pupils concerned, and time available for personal interview with the parents. Sometimes several tactful, patient interviews are needed in a single case. Many parents require to be convinced as well as persuaded before they will take action.

A Serious Obstacle.

"Two hundred and sixty-eight cases of contagious disease in eight months means a serious obstacle to the general progress of the classes as well as the retardation of the individuals most concerned. In addition to this, there is not only in some cases an aftermath of more or less permanent physical loss to the parents. Miss Shearer testifies that the experience of other cities shows that the organization of an adequate staff results in a large decrease in the number of cases of contagious disease, chiefly through the closer supervision made possible.

"Another valuable part of the nurse's duties is to enforce lessons of personal cleanliness; and, as far as possible, to protect our children from loathsome skin diseases such as lice, itch, ringworm, impetigo, etc. One hundred cases of skin disease were dealt with in the past eight months. Unless there is time for frequent visits to a school, permitting an almost unremitting observation, it is hopeless to wholly suppress these diseases so far as the school is concerned.

"An additional useful service which the nurse could perform, if not overburdened with other work, is the promotion of the hygienic education of both parents and pupils. Not only, as has been suggested, should there be time for much more home visiting, but the nurse should frequently address the parents, particularly the mothers, at the meetings of the Home and School Clubs and other school gatherings attended by parents. There could even, with advantage, be special meetings of parents to be addressed by the nurse and others on matters of child health. A sympathetic appreciation on the part of parents of the aims and work of the school nurse is a powerful factor in its success. In some cities the Home and School Clubs have visiting committees who co-operate with the nurse and, I am told, achieve good results.

"In schools where the number of nurses permits, the instruction in hygiene, in the janitor classes, is partly undertaken by the nurse, whose practical treatment and the authority due to her office serve to make such teaching very impressive.

Several Advantages.
"The appointment of an additional nurse would entitle us to formal recognition from the department and this would secure several advantages. The special grants for which we would qualify would pay for a complete equipment for keeping satisfactory records, and for other supplies. The department offers to send a nurse from the provincial staff, who would spend several weeks to assist in the organization of the work. The department also accepts the responsibility for giving special assistance in dealing with an epidemic of contagious disease among school children.

by the schedule for the salaries of women teachers. Miss Lovick's salary is $1,250, which is the maximum according to this schedule. "As to the assignment of duties, I would recommend that the schools be divided, forming two districts: Princess Street would effect this very equally. Each nurse should have her own district as there are advantages arising from the more intimate acquaintance which follows. They might, however, after a time change districts. They should work in the closest co-operation, conferring frequently for that purpose. When a nurse is appointed for the Separate Schools it will be very desirable to co-operate as far as necessary with her also. One of our nurses should be appointed as chief nurse and the other as an assistant. The chief nurse should be responsible for a general charge of the work and make necessary reports to the board.

Home and School Club.
There was a very large attendance at a meeting of the Home and School Club of St. Mary's school, held on Thursday night. The club voted Rev. Father Lacey a substantial sum to assist in the camp for the boys this summer and the club also decided to give a prize of $5 to the boy making the highest standing in the entrance examinations. Following the business, the secretary-treasurer addressed the members, asking for their assistance at the picnic to be held on July 10th, at Brophy's Point. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant time was spent in a social way.
