Why We Tap the Secondaries of Neuroformers

The neutralizing effect occurs as follows: Assuming that the coils "G" and "H" are the same size, and condensers "C-2" and "C-3" of equal values, neutralizing voltages are set up in "H," and while the "G" voltages are fed back to "F" through "C-2," "reverse voltages" from "H" go back through "C-3" and buck the feedback from "G." Oscillation is thereby prevented.
 However, if coil "H" should happen to be larger than "G," so that greater voltages are generated across the former than across the latter, we can still obtain neutralization by controlling the feedback with the condenser "C-3." If we have "H" larger than "G," greater voltages will be set up in "H," but if "C-3" is made correspondingly smaller than "C-2," the action of "C-3" will be to throttle the excess voltage generated in "H," and by adjustment, neutralization will again be effected.
 In the complete neurodyne, illustrated in Fig. 4, the secondary of the neuroformer, shown as "M," is usually about 60 turns—much larger than the primary "L," which is usually 15 turns. This means that if "C-3" as shown by the dotted line, it would have to be made very small indeed to sufficiently throttle the big voltages set up in the secondary "M." It would have to be so small that it would be very inconvenient to handle, so to get around this it has become the practice to tap off for the neutralizing condenser at some point lower down on the coil, so that the generated voltage will be smaller, and the capacity "C-5" may be increased to an easily handled size. Common practice, as we have said, is to tap off at a point about equal to the primary winding—that is, 15 or 20 turns.

Improves Historic Battlefields.
 Ottawa, June 18.—Restoration of the historic sites in the province of Ontario during the past three years has involved the expenditure by the Federal government of $8,519. Of this $2,368 was spent on the acquisition, restoration and marking of the battlefields of the war of 1812, 1813 and 1814 in the Niagara district.

Wheat Pool Contracts Now Legal.
 Regina, Sask., June 18.—Contracts signed by Saskatchewan farmers to deliver their wheat to the wheat pool organization are now legal. Directors of the organization gave an official estimate of the acreage now under contract, of 6,150,000, well over the objective of 6,132,000 acres.

Does Not Want Him.
 Windsor, June 18.—Marshall B. Terrell, fifteen years old, whose home is in Gardenville, Ont., near Trenton, held here, is wanted by the United States army officials, being listed as a deserter, but United States immigration officials say the United States does not want him. He will likely be returned home.

WHY THE WEATHER?

DR. CHARLES F. BROOKS
 Secretary, American Meteorological Society, Telus How.

Two "Lows" From One.
 Intense low pressure areas sometimes cut themselves in two, making two moderate storms from one strong one. This is accomplished readily in late spring and early summer, when the strong sunlight on the following side of the low warms the cooler, drier westerly winds which succeed the warmer, moister, southerly ones. One day the weather may show a big, strong "low," as on May 24th, 1924, with cool, brisk to high northwest winds following it. The next day it will be seen that these winds along the back of the "low" have turned almost at right angles to their former course and are now coming from the southwest. Heat from a high sun has warmed the dry air readily, starting convection. The northwest surface wind which we saw on the map has thus become mixed with the general southwest wind above it and now, as a result of a redistribution of pressure, the whole wind motion appears as southwest. This turning of the cooler, drier, and, therefore, heavier wind has apparently driven a wedge of higher pressure into the low and split it into first and second sections. The second or westward section is likely to be forced backwards, or from east to west, a reversal of the usual motion. Hence part of the storm may return to give more rain at a place where it has already previously rained and cleared off.

FAMILY LARGE AND OLD.
 Known Descendants of Claude Bernard Number 951.
 Lille, France, June 18.—A family party numbering 377 met yesterday at the home of Bernard Verley, who, with his wife and 19 children acted as hosts to the relatives. Further connections bring the family to 951, the balance of which were unable to attend the party.
 They are the descendants of Claude Bernard, who was married 239 years ago. The celebrations began with a mass and the dedication of a tablet bearing the names of 21 members of the family who died in the war.

Dismisses Motion.
 Toronto, June 18.—Justice Riddell has dismissed a motion by the Kemptville Milling Co. for an order setting aside a judgment by Justice Rose in which he dismissed the claim for $46,145 damages for injury to the company's plant and cutting off their transmission lines, and awarded the village of Kemptville $500.

A Huge Loss.
 Ottawa, June 18.—A single voyage of a Canadian government merchant ship to India resulted in a loss of $73,400, Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways told the House of Commons committee on national railways and government merchant marine.

CORNS SOFTEN IN FOOT BATH

Hot water extraction of corns and callouses offers the only perfect way to rid yourself of these painful troubles. Take just a minute or two and spread a few drops of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor over the sensitive surface of the corn or callous, and the pain is stopped at once. Then you will forget your corns, because they will not pain. Later you use a hot foot bath for five or ten minutes. Corn crumples up and drops off. It is a grand and glorious feeling that you get from Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It costs but little, and is sold by all druggists.
