The Purity of Cuticura Makes It Unexcelled For All Toilet Purposes

How You May Change Your Face Completely

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can easily remove it and have a new one. The thin veil of stifling half-dead cuticle is an encumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous, young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe. There's a simple, old-fashioned remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercuric wax from your druggist and apply at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The wax gently absorbs all the lifeless skin, leaving a healthy, beautiful complexion, fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples. It is pleasant to use, and economical. The face so treated soon looks years younger.

stood in the ice box till needed. To Make Peach Jelly with Home-Made Pectin: Use peaches which are not quite ripe. Wash them, then cut them into quarters, not removing skins or pits. Put the fruit into a preserving kettle with water barely to cover and boil till soft. Then strain off the juice and to one pint of this add one-half pint of the home-made pectin and two tablespoons of lemon juice. Bring this mixture to a boil, let simmer for two minutes, add one pint of warm granulated sugar (heated on a plate in the oven) and continue to simmer till two drops will form at the same time on the edge of a spoon, when a little of the jelly is taken up in the spoon, held high in the air, and dripped back into the kettle (the "jelly stage" is reached when the two drops form at once). Turn the jelly at once into hot sterilized jelly glasses, let stand out of a draught till cold (a draught may crack the glasses), then cover with melted paraffine wax. Throughout this cooking process skim the jelly when scum collects. Every housekeeper likes to have at least a few jars of this delicately flavoured jelly on hand to open for a guest meal. Can You Make Good Peach Jelly? "How can I make Peach Jelly?" inquires a Letter Friend. Peaches lack sufficient "pectin" (that gummy substance which makes jelly "jelly") to make a good firm jelly of themselves. Therefore prepared pectin must be provided to mix with the peach juice. There are two ways to obtain this prepared pectin: one way is to buy the manufactured pectin from your grocer (I am not permitted to mention the trade name under which this is sold, at that would be advertising). Directions for use come on the bottle. The other way to obtain prepared pectin is to make it yourself, as follows: Home-Made Pectin: Buy thick-skinned oranges and pare off the yellow rind, discarding it. The pectin is contained in the thick, white, under-part of the orange skin. Chip off all this white under-skin, then weigh it. To one-half pound of this skin add three quarts of cold water, let the mixture stand overnight, and in the morning put it over the fire and let it simmer for two hours; drain through double cheesecloth. It is now ready to use, but if desired may be bottled and

CHANGE PARTS IN GROUPS

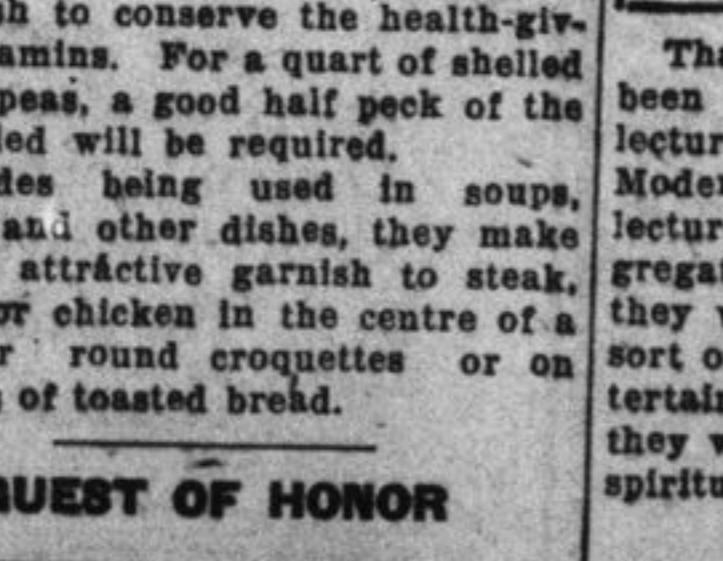

Besides moving groups about, to change the atmosphere of a room, it is a good plan to switch parts of groups, from one group to another, so that entirely new arrangements would result. The new might prove move to your liking than the old.

How to Cook Green Peas.

As everybody likes new peas, to-day we are giving different combinations that will help to make a few so long way. If they are plentiful use them fresh-picked. Quickly shelled, and popped immediately into a kettle, boiled, season with salt, pepper and butter, they are perfect. Cover them with just enough water to prevent scorching, and allow this water to cook down so that none of it has to be drained off. This requires careful watching as the peas burn easily. Most cooks recommend adding salt during the last few minutes of cooking, as it has a tendency to toughen the peas if cooked long. A very little sugar added to the peas is an improvement especially if the peas are not as fresh and sweet as they might be. A speck of soda too in the water helps to keep them green, but of late we are told that no soda or acids should be cooked with vegetables, if we wish to conserve the health-giving vitamins. For a quart of shelled green peas, a good half peck of the unshelled will be required. Besides being used in soups, salads and other dishes, they make a very attractive garnish to steak, chops or chicken in the centre of a stew or round croquettes or on squares of toasted bread.

QUEST OF HONOR

The guest of honor sits at the hostess' right at a formal dinner. If the dinner is not given in honor of any person the oldest lady occupies that place.

The Egyptians made glass over four thousand years ago.

The Editor hears

That Rev. Dr. Sclater, who has been giving an inspiring course of lectures on "Christian Optimism in Modern English Poetry," said in his lecture on George Meredith that congregations got the kind of preachers they wanted. If they wished for a sort of inferior Harry Lauder to entertain them they would get what they wanted; if they truly wanted a spiritual leader they would get one.

That the swimming classes arranged at the Y.M.C.A. by the board of the Y.W.C.A. for girls have been well attended. The ladies of the board are represented at the lessons by one of their number.

That the Kivans have fine voices and their sing-song on Tuesday evening was a great success and should be repeated. Community singing is a fine thing. A singing people is a happy people.

That many requests for barbers come to the local employment bureau and the supposition is that bobbed hair is good for the trade.

That the picture post cards sold at Kingston shops are a splendid means of advertising Kingston. On Monday there were a number of artists in town, and in one shop they were seen buying dozens of cards with stamps to send them to their friends in all parts of the world.

That an outstanding honor has been conferred on a Toronto woman, Mrs. H. D. Warren, who visited Kingston last March in connection with the Girl Guides winter camp, who was made Lady of Grace of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. Mrs. Warren is well-known for her activities in connection with war work, as well as the important part she plays in Girl Guide affairs as Dominion commissioner. The event was particularly remarkable in that for the first time in 800 years the investiture was conducted by a British sovereign as patron of the order. Present at the ceremony, which took place in Buckingham Palace, besides the King and Queen, were a number of other members of the Royal family who held rank in the order, and the procession was led by the Duke of Connaught, the Grand Prior.
