MAXSON FURHAL JUREZ
A Plea for Justice.

There's a crime that is ofttimes committed, and policemen have nothing to say. While for murder or robbing a person there is someone who always must pay.

So now, friends, let us band together. Let us say from the base of our hearts, "We think it's quite time we cut out this crime—That of cutting a pie in six parts."
—Lawrence A. Barrett.

We Wonder If His Audience Gave Him the Air.
The itinerant lecturer had taken his first ride in an aeroplane. As he was alighting out, a bystander asked: "What was you thinking about while in the air?"
"The subject of my lecture, sir! The subject of my lecture."
"What is the subject of your lecture?"
"Back to the soil, sir! Back to the soil."

Tree Grows in Ford Engine.
Dear Editor:
Last fall I left my Ford behind the barn. Imagine my surprise when I went out to get it and found a tree growing from the engine.

I telephoned immediately for automobile and tree experts to solve the mystery. After a thorough investigation we figured out how it had happened. There was so much dirt in the cylinders and on top of the engine that a seed, falling from a nearby tree, had taken root and grown into a healthy elm.

As I couldn't remove the roots of the tree without dynamiting the car, I was forced to trim the branches so that I could at least see ahead when driving. To date a crowd of two eagles, and seventeen robins have built nests in the tree—all of which goes to prove what a wonderful car a Ford is for the money! As this seemed to me quite a novel experience, I thought your readers might be interested.

The Mirrors of Home.
John Henry had broken the mirror in his room by bouncing a forbidden ball. The pieces stayed in place, and his parents were in no great haste to have them replaced.
One day, when John came down to breakfast, his head was rather tousled.

"John Henry," said his father, "are you sure you combed your hair?"
"Well, replied John somewhat sulkily, "I combed all the heads I could see."

I Hear You Calling Me.
I hear you calling me—the sad refrain Comes to me o'er and o'er and yet again; Try as I may there's naught that I can do To hush that still, small voice that comes from you.

Exuberant Steed Sends Horseshoe Hurling Through Glass.
Perth, July 16.—Exuberant, possibly, at the dignity suddenly thrust upon him, and the pomp and colorful splendor with which he was surrounded, the horse ridden by "King Billy" in the Orange procession kicked his hind heels in the air and sent a heavy horseshoe hurtling through a store window.

The grocery store of C. A. Carmer & Son was the establishment to suffer, and, according to the proprietor, the missile just missed crashing through the plate-glass counter on one of the silent salesmen inside. When the smash came the clerks inside momentarily ducked to cover, but, finding that nothing more was coming, emerged to estimate the damage. One of the men had been in the window just a moment before the horse threw his feet in the air. The Orangemen will pay for the damage.

THE HARVEST OUTLOOK

On Wolfe Island the Yield Will Not Be Up to the Average.

Wolfe Island, July 15.—The hum of the mowing machine is heard on every side. Some fields have a fair stand of hay, the second or third cut being the best. New seeding, in the most of cases, is poor; on the whole there is hardly an average crop. Early seeded oats are headed out, and promise a light crop, straw being very short. Later sowing is doing fine, if rust does not strike them. They will be much better than the early sowing. Corn and all other root crop are doing fine. The supply of milk at the different cheese factories is decreasing.

The Wolfe Islanders, who are interested in the growing of strawberries, have every reason to be proud of their product. This week will see the end of the season.

On Monday morning at five o'clock, the Wolfe Islander made a special trip to the city to convey Miss Harriet Dawson to the Hospital. Mrs. K. Spoor, who has been quite ill, is improving rapidly. ASQUITH OUTLINES PLAN FOR SECURITY

The Times, However, is Doubtful of Its Obtaining Dominion's Support.

London, July 16.—"Any contribution to the vexed and still obscure question of European security is welcome, but we confess we think it sanguine in the present circumstances to count on any general agreement of the Dominions to such a scheme," says The Times, commenting on Mr. Asquith's plan, outlined in Parliament for a plan of general European security in which the British Empire should play a part with the consent of the Dominions.

It is understood that although Ramsay MacDonald refused to make a definite statement about it in the House, that the Dominions have so far been unable even to agree with the Mother Country on the manner of their representation at the London conference. Regent despatches from Ottawa claimed Canada had received an invitation to attend the conference and that Hon. J. A. Robb would be nominated. As the conference begins on Wednesday this seems a little improbable.
