LIVED IN KINGSTON SEVENTY-TWO YEARS

Mr. John F. McEwen Celebrates Eightieth Birthday.

The Whig offers congratulations to Mr. John F. McEwen, of 202 King street, who celebrates his eightieth birthday to-day and joins the ranks of Kingston's octogenarians. Mr. McEwen has been in Kingston since he was eight years of age and has seen many changes take place. With his father he worked at the Kingston Foundry for many years and he also served a long period of time as a marine engineer, sailing on the Pierpont, the Alexandria, the Hero and other passenger steamers of by-gone days. For many years he conducted a machine shop on Princess street and can name many prominent citizens who worked there or frequented the shop on business.

Mr. McEwen is a brother-in-law of John McKeivey, Sr., who is now eighty-six years of age.

CITY HALL

This morning the case of a wayward boy was brought up in the Police Court. The lad in question seems just about incorrigible. His mother is dead and his father has not been able to look after him. He has been a ward of the Children's Aid Society but has proved unmanageable and the necessary steps are being taken to have him placed in a reform school.

By means of the round robin circulated amongst the aldermen permission was given the I.O.D.E. for the coming of the Chautauqua to Kingston.

The local Labor Council has applied for and secured the use of the Fair Grounds for their annual celebration on Labor Day.

City Auditor Muir is back from his vacation and once more busily engaged at his office.

Both the city assessor's office and that of the city engineer report "work as usual and lots of it."
