PETES BACK AGAIN TO-MORROW EVENING

They Had Tight Squeeze for Victory Last Time and Should Go Home Disappointed.

The Peterboro senior C.O.B.L. outfit will be on deck in Kingston again on Wednesday evening and will engage in another tilt with the local nine. Last week's game provided a good many sensations and kept the crowd interested. The Petes won it by an eyelash but should not have the joy of repeating their stunt.

Perhaps the order will be reversed this time and Kelly will be started and Cherry used as relief pitcher. Cherry is about the best bet in the circuit as a relief man as he starts well whether warmed up or not, something that is seldom found in any hurler. Kelly is a good starting man—a good man all through in fact—but it takes Gallagher two or three frames to strike his stride.

So far in the second half the Kingston team has not done anything to drive the local fans into ecstasies but many of them, remembering the sensational spurt which carried the locals out in front in the first section, are waiting hopefully for the playoff games, which look very much as if they would be in Belleville and Kingston. Oshawa has a very outside chance of breaking into the show by winning every game from now to the finish and Peterboro still has a look-in also but the Trunks are considered the logical contenders.

Tomorrow evening's game is important to Peterboro but not particularly interesting to Kingston except as a workout and a means of keeping the team travelling at a good speed. The locals should win if they are going to do anything much before the end of the half.

TO-NIGHT

This evening at the cricket field 4th Hussars and Live Wires will meet in a game postponed from the middle of last week. Since their battle with Ganaoche the other day the Live Wires have taken on an entirely different aspect and look like a formidable outfit. This evening's game will be started off quickly and should be a good one. Only the heaviest of rain storms could keep it from being good and Hussars are going to get one of the merriest old battles of the season.

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

Go after distance if you must, but don't try to kill the ball. That's the advice of Jock Hutchison, former British open champion and present holder of the western open.

Hutchison, unlike most pros, thinks distance hitting should be encouraged. Hutchison realizes that the player gets his biggest thrill out of a long driven tee shot.

"It is just as easy to hit a long ball as a short one, once you have mastered control," contends Jock. "There are times when distance is imperative, and other times when it only seems to be."

"When you are on a wide fairway with the whole world to shoot at, cut loose and see just how far you can get the darn ball. But when your objective is a green with traps on either side and you are 300 yards away use less muscle and more mentality."

The mental hazard of being compelled to place your shot on the green is something you did not have to worry about when you were on "the wide fairway with the whole world to shoot at."

This in itself is going to disturb you. As a result you are quite likely to tighten up and instead of swinging through in a rhythmic arc you probably will tear into the ball with all your might, trying to kill it.

The effect will be a lunge, rather than a sweeping hit. If you don't top the ball you will hook it or push it. Either you will wind up in the rough or in a trap.

Even the champions have a tough time making 300-yard approach shots stick on the green, let alone the duffers.

Play it safe. Take a club you know you can handle and swing smoothly and naturally.

What if you are short? Isn't that better than being trapped on in mean, unplayable rough? It's the extra effort—the tendency to kill the ball—that sends scores mounting.

A Clean Fight.

One thing is certain—the nomination of Davis, with that of Coolidge, insures a clean campaign between the two historic parties. There is no buncombe in either of these men. They are candidates with brains that function clearly, men who are accustomed to seek the facts in the evidence and act on them. When they begin to state the issues, to present them to the country, the voters will receive a liberal education in the science of American government. Each of them, and Senator LaFollette as well, has a character above reproach. No mud can stick to any of them. They are the highest products of our Republic. One may disagree with them, but one must admire them.—Detroit News.
