TRAGEDY FOLLOWED RUSSIAN SHOEMAKER

Death of James Modney Recalls Drowning of Employee and Children's Tragic End.

The final chapter in the drowning of George Palmer, shoemaker, which occurred some time ago, was closed on Saturday morning when James Modney, his employer, passed away at the Kingston General Hospital from an ailment he had been fighting for years.

"Jim," as he was known to hundreds of Kingstonians, was a Russian. He was a good workman, and when one arm became helpless because of his ailment he worked along and hired help. The late George Palmer was one of his hired workmen, and "Jim," always conscientious to a superlative degree, blamed himself in some measure for Palmer's untimely end, though there was no reason why he should. Shortly after Palmer's death he started to lose ground in his fight for life and the end came Saturday.

Other tragedies occurred in Modney's life. When he became established in Canada he sent to Russia for his wife and children but the condition of the country was such that no satisfactory communication could be made. Then word reached that two little sons had died of starvation during the Russian famine.

Deceased had been in the country thirteen years, formerly keeping a shop next to Dr. O'Connor's on King street and latterly moving to his late place of business in the block between Johnson and William streets.

The funeral took place Monday morning from R. J. Reid's undertaking parlors to Cataract cemetery, the Rev. W. E. Kidd, of St. George's officiating.

LETTERS To The Editor

Dog Show at Fair. Bath Road, Aug. 9.—(To the Editor):—I am pleased to make further announcement that I have been successful (through the generosity of the City Council) in securing sufficient space in their building situated upon the city fair grounds for the holding of a dog show in connection with the Kingston Industrial Exhibition, Sept. 16-20th; and furthermore I have been also successful in securing the services of W. A. Twigg as superintendent of said branch of the Kingston Industrial Exhibition, who handled last year's dog show successfully with 110 dogs benched in tent, with an up-to-date building and all new benches. This doubtless will be a great feature of the big exhibition. Mr. Twigg with his thirty years experience at the large dog shows and this being his fifth show handled in Kingston, with these aforesaid conditions prevailing will result in a bigger and better dog show than ever presented to our visitors.

The Kennel Club of our city have intimated their desire to assist most fully.

Let our slogan be "Bigger and Better" and all-together for the 1924 exhibition.

R. J. BUSHELL, Sec.-treas and manager.
