MAXSON FURBALL JUDIZ

Just a Minute.
By R. H. Farley.
There now, little girlie, stop looking so surly,
You're quite deserted, it's true;
You've not lost your beauty, adorable cutie,
But here's what's the matter with you.
When you've an engagement, you don't leave in amazement
Every man who comes to your door.
You do not look stunning, nor do you look cunning,
In fact, you're a terrible bore.
And those things, girl, are bad—would discourage a lad.
But we really can let those pass,
For the matter is, cutie, you keep sweet patootie
Guessing too much, more or less
While you leave him in haste, maybe to powder your face,
And he must sit there alone waiting,
L'Envoi
A man is known, he weeps, by the company he keeps,
A woman by whom she keeps waiting.

Making It Worse.
"The world is full of trouble," sentimentally remarked the Professor.
"Yes," chuckled the Cynic, "and still people insist on getting married."
—Gertrude Heller.

Ask The Man Who Owns One.
"Animals ain't much good nowadays 'ceptin' to decorate the zoo."
"Oh I dunno! My cousin's boy writes that he has a blind tiger in the city an' he's makin' a fortune offin it."
—William W. Pratt.

Scratching my back intrigues me much,
For I've a skin I love to touch.

Going Him One Better.
Lawyer: "Tell the story of your fight in your own words."
Witness: "Well, the plaintiff came along and said, 'Is it warm enough for you?' and then I made it hot for him."
—Ruth Lytell.

Backward.
"Some ways children ain't as smart nowadays as they used to be," in the crossroads store vouchsafed Gap Johnson, of Rumpus Ridge.
"Ain't, har?" asked a feller from down in Booger Holler.
"Nope, Job cursed the day he was born but my last boy, Bearcat, was mighty nigh two years old before he could swear to amount to much."

"Hootch, Mon!"
Her Opinion.
"Now, Helen," said her mother at the beach, "watch how good papa can swim."
After watching her dad for a few minutes, the five year old daughter said: "Mamma, I think daddie is a poor fish."
—Roundoff Laban.

Fugitives From Justice.
A La Mode.
Eye o' Baby Buntin',
Daddy's gone a-buntin',
To get a new seal-skin
To wrap the baby's Mamma in.
—Mrs. Eva L. White.
Love
Love makes the world go 'round,
So it has been said,
Ever since that happy day
When Eve and Adam wed.
But in these hectic times,
If I can see aright,
Love makes the world go 'round
In autos every night.
—E. D. K.

Highly Colored.
Rastus: "Florian is skairt o' me."
Temus: "He am not. He's a good scrapper."
Rastus: "Good scrapper, huh! Why, dat boy am so yellow he's got orange in his veins."
—Clark Salmon.

Inate Husband (meeting wife at appointed place): "Here you are again—an hour late! What's the good of daylight-saving, I want to know."
—Mrs. Frank Wells.

Probably.
I hate to see the sun rise
But I'll be on the spot
To see its golden glory
The morning I am shot.
—Tennyson J. Daff.

The Great Question.

She: "Since when?"
—Belle Webber.

An Object Lesson.
Pat Dugan, the proprietor of the Ideal Drug Store, forgot to wash his face on this particular morning.
A friendly negress came into the store and confronted Pat.
"New brudder," she began, "won't you—all give some contribution to our church?"
That night Pat took a steaming hot bath.—Jake Cohen.

RESULTS IN BANKING

Those Who Passed the Examinations Held by Queen's University.

The tenth annual examinations in connection with the courses in banking, were held June 9-14, at various centres at which students had made application, by Queen's University on behalf of the Canadian Bankers' Association. The courses, which fill into two parts—the preliminary course leading to the degree of Associate, and the advanced course leading to the degree of Fellow of the Canadian Bankers' Association—consist of six subjects each. As in former years, candidates were allowed to write on any number of subjects from one to six and were credited with all in which the required standing was obtained. They were, however, only given a diploma if they obtained over 40 per cent. in each subject and 60 per cent. on the aggregate of six subjects. Students obtaining sixty marks or over on each subject and an average of 75 per cent. receive Honor standing. Below are given the lists of students obtaining honors and also the pass list showing those who succeeded in completing, with satisfactory standard, the work required for the Fellows' and Associates' diplomas.

Graduates in Fellows' Course.
Honors—The following candidates have been awarded the standing of Fellows of the Canadian Bankers' Association, with honors; in order of standing:
