Answered Letters. Young Housewife: "Does one cut angel cake?" Answer: No. One pulls it apart with two forks. This also applies to sponge cake.

Careless: "I have stupidly gotten some axle grease on a white dress. How is this removed?" Answer: Rub the spot well with lard and then wash with soap and lukewarm water.

Mother of Three: "The small blackboard which I keep for the purpose of teaching my children their A, B, C's, has gradually lost in Kingston during the week of the Industrial Exhibition. Pretty girls will take part in the dances, the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides will make themselves useful in various parts and every one will help to make the celebration a success.

That this is the season for corn roasts and every evening the shores of the lake and river will be ablaze with beacon lights that will tell the passing travellers that some happy people are enjoying themselves.

That the majority of citizens are in favor of using the building given by the late G. Y. Chown as a library. It is near the residential part of the city, quite large enough for Kingston and in the opinion of experts should make a handsome and convenient library.

That the Canadian National Exhibition being held in Toronto is the biggest and the best yet. Every woman should be sure to see the wing where the work of the brains and hands of the women of Canada is displayed under the auspices of the Federated Women's Institutes.

Its black surface. Is there anything I can do to restore it? I know that a new blackboard would not cost me a fortune—but with six little feet to keep in shoes, to say nothing of other expenses with three children, I don't want to spend money on a thing that I can possibly repair.

Entertainer: "I am going to give a party and my decorative candles on the mantle are soiled. How can they be cleaned?" Answer: They will look like new if you sponge them with a piece of absorbent cotton wet with alcohol.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.

What more novel dish for your Christmas dinner? Or any other winter meal? Put it up in a jar while cheap and plentiful costs little.
