"Jay" across the streets is none by. However careful the motorist may be, he cannot be expected to be on his guard against people who dash out hurriedly from behind another car in the middle of the street or across quickly to speak to a friend on the other side. The crossings are to be respected and here it is the duty of the motorist to care for the foot passenger. Wise people, however, will keep an eye out for cars, for motorists do not always fulfill the obligations of the road. A traveller from the Pacific coast says the traffic regulations in Vancouver, B.C., are excellent. The motorist keeps his eye on the street, and the pedestrians obey the laws made for their safety.

That a guest at a banquet given last year at Calgary for the Prince of Wales was impressed with the fact that the Prince in conversation, referred to his brothers as merely "Henry" or "George" and to his sister as "Mary." Even the King and Queen were just "father" or "mother." The westerner had evidently not been brought up among well-bred people who would consider it the worst possible form to speak of the members of their family by their title even if it were only a plain "Mr."

That when the 19th open tournament of the Canadian ladies' golf tournament opens in Hamilton in September, noted players from all parts of Canada will visit that city, and enthusiasts of the game will witness brilliant play. Neither will the social side of the game be overlooked, and there is expected to be a great deal of entertaining by Hamilton hostesses. The Tamahaac club will be headquarters for a number of the visiting notables, and there will be various festivities there during their stay.

Champion Speller.

Mrs. Anna Welhart, mother of five children, recently was proclaimed champion speller of Cincinnati, in a contest in which thousands of men and women participated. In the course of the matches she spelled 15,000 words without an error. The finals, in which the winners of the district elimination contests took part, lasted three and a half hours. Mrs. Welhart's last opponent was a sixteen-year-old girl. Shortly before Mrs. Welhart won, her opponent tripped on "melancholy."

Atoms made of Space.

An atom is mostly empty space, for the electrons that make up its substance are like flies in a cathedral compared to the size of the atom.

That Miss Elsie Ferguson of St. Thomas, spoke on "Girls and Apples," at the Woman's Institute section of the C.N.E., Toronto. Miss Ferguson has 25 acres of apples and finds it so interesting and profitable a pastime that she would encourage other girls to do likewise. Graduating from Toronto University in 1922, Miss Ferguson looked around for something to do, and her father having an orchard to spare and the outdoor work appealing to her she took up the raising of apples. To prove she has made a success of it we have only to state that some of her apples are in the Ontario exhibit at Wembley.

Making Your Own Tomato Catsup. There is no doubt that housekeepers to-day can buy some very delicious bottled tomato catsups. Indeed, there are many women who hold that the varieties bottled by the manufacturers are more delectable than any they can put up at home. Yet when one has a surplus of tomatoes in the garden it is only thrifty to use some of them for this purpose. The following recipes will be found good:

Southern Tomato Catsup: Wash one peck of ripe tomatoes and slice them into the preserving kettle; let come to a boil and simmer till soft enough to be pressed through a wide-meshed sieve (many housewives use one of the heavy wire sink strainers for this purpose.) Now put the strained tomato back into the preserving kettle and add to it six raw, peeled onions which have been put through the food chopper, four large red sweet peppers which have also been put through the grinder (seeds previously removed), two pounds of granulated sugar, one third cup of salt, one tablespoon each of ground mace and ground cloves, eight table-spoons of dry mustard and one-half cup of horseradish root. Boil this mixture for one hour, then add to it one quart of vinegar and let simmer for one hour longer. Turn into hot, sterilized bottles (that is, bottles which have been boiled, empty, in clear water for 15 minutes) and cork at once, dipping the corked neck of the bottle into hot, melted paraffine wax to seal airtight over the cork.

Old-Fashioned Tomato Catsup: Stew four quarts of ripe tomatoes till soft, then press through a sieve. Return the strained tomato to the preserving kettle and add two cups of vinegar, two cups of granulated sugar, five tablespoons of salt and two tablespoons of mixed spices tied in a small square of cheesecloth. Cook till thick—about two hours, then remove bag of spices, bottle, and seal as above directed.

Tomato Catsup: Boil one peck of ripe tomatoes in salted water till the skins begin to loosen, then drain and rub off skins with the fingers. Cut the vegetable small and put it back into the preserving kettle with one pint of vinegar, one-third cup of salt, one-half cup of sugar and one tablespoon each of celery salt, broken stick cinnamon and whole cloves tied in a bag. Boil three hours, remove spice bag, fill hot bottles and seal at once.

Tomorrow—Success in House-keeping. All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question. THE PRINCE IN PARIS.

A friend in Paris writes in ecstasies on the subject of the Most Popular Young Man in the World. "On all sides," she says, "one heard nothing but praise of his smile, his boyish manner and his charm, whether it was at the embassy, where cabinet ministers and ambassadors agreed that he was an charming garçon, at polo or in the street, where women of the people gazed affectionately and cried 'Quel amour!'

"How hard the royalties worked, and what an amount they put into a crowded day. The Princes were both up and out playing polo at 9 a.m., at bagatelle, after the big embassy reception, and attended every kind of official function and ceremony during the course of that day; and one feels that when H.R.H. left the embassy and became the Earl of Chester, he indeed deserved his rest from royal duties!

"He rode in the Bois, played golf and polo, and lunched and dined with his friends like any ordinary young man.

"As luck would have it, the sky was overcast on the first night he dined at the Chateau de Madrid in the Bois, with Mr. and Mrs. Bate, General Trotter, and some friends, so the crowd went elsewhere, and the most popular young man in the world was able to dance freely and amuse himself, as do the most obscure.

"Afterwards he went each evening to dance chez Seymour, a haunt made fashionable a short time ago by the Dolly Sisters, which was in their absence almost deserted. Here the Prince danced to a perfect orchestra in absolute quiet, while the curious crowd hurried from one more popular resort to the other, seeking him always, but never finding. "The proud proprietor, with super-human self-control, kept silence about the presence of the royal visitor—until he had left Paris; and now all the crowd flock to where he was last week!"
