Amherst Island Girl Bride of Collin's Bay Farmer.

In St. George's Cathedral on August 27th, Rev. J. D. Success in Housekeeping. "Since I gave up my office position to marry and keep house," writes a reader of this column, "I miss that thrill of success that the old business life held. I don't mean that my present life isn't lots happier than the old; I simply mean that a business 'job' has something stimulating about it that housework hasn't! I wish housework were more exciting."

I do not agree with this anonymous Reader Friend. Because I think that housekeeping is the most thrilling business in the world. In there nothing "stimulating" about the housewife's constant effort to keep down expenses? Is there no "thrill" in striving for success when trying out a new recipe, or getting up a guest dinner, or attempting to re-upholster some piece of furniture ourselves?

There is just as much chance for success in housekeeping as in any other line of work. And to explain this statement, I am going to describe what I consider a successful housekeeper:

She is the woman who keeps cheerful. It's more necessary for her to keep cheerful than for any other member of her family because the housekeeper is the foreman of the home. Others depend upon her for their comfort.

She is the woman who uses her food left-overs for other meals; and who cans every quart of fruit and vegetables not needed on the home table.

She is the woman who systematizes her housework so that she has a good portion of every afternoon off for resting, reading, making calls on her friends, or enjoying herself in any other way.

She also finds a way to make money in the home if she longs to make money. (As so many housekeepers do, in this day of the high-cost-of-everything). There is always some way—whether it be by making fancywork articles to sell through a Woman's Exchange or small shops, raising some kind of fancy bird or animal, or some other way. I know of nothing that gives one greater happiness than a growing balance in a savings bank book.

She is the woman who lets her

That the vexed question of whether the community hall, built in many villages by the Woman's Institute, should be used for dancing, was again raised at the Woman's Building of the Canadian Exhibition in Toronto this week. "Do you let your young folks dance in it?" is the question I often have asked me," said Mrs. Albert Walker. "Of course we do. And we older folks dance with them. We do the good old Circassian circle to the tune of the British Grenadiers and it is as good anytime as Walter Camp's daily dozen."

Mrs. Walker who is an Irishwoman with a great sense of humor, injected much of her native wit into her address and kept her hearers in a merry mood. The building of the community hall has been a real work of love for Mrs. Walker and she worked at it with such zeal that in less than a year the rural centre where she lives is enjoying one of the best community centres in Ontario. "And I prayed about it too," she said.

That school begins next week and the children who were rejoicing last June at the prospect of holidays are, in their hearts, glad to think of the pleasures of the fall term. Most of them really like work and they look forward to it with real strengthened by days spent in the country on the river or in the town with bathing and boating so easily enjoyed in our lakeside city.

That the largest list of applications for entrance to R. M. C. in the history of the college is in the hands of the authorities.

That Paris says skirts are much shorter. But the really smart Parisienne does not wear her knee high yet. To-day they come a little less than midway between ankle and knee. The full skirt is permissible at present, as one phase of the autumn silhouette. With the full skirt, however, the upper part of the silhouette must be slim and narrow.

Drink Plenty of Water. "The way to maintain youthful vigor is to be regular in living habits and drink plenty of water," said ex-policeman Whitman of New York, 58 years old, at his silver-wedding anniversary. "Every day a person should drink not less than ten glasses of water if they would keep themselves fit, and I recommend that they

A Queer Beetle. The Westminster Gazette of recent date announces the death of a curious inmate of the South Kensington Museum of Natural History. This was the grub of an unknown beetle which had lived, the paper states, for thirty years without ever undergoing transformation into an adult. For six years this beetle had been in the care of a single keeper and with him had travelled half way around the world. Its habitat was a pencil case.
