TOMORROW'S MENU table with columns for Breakfast, Coffee, Luncheon, Tea, and Dinner.

There are several methods of putting up cucumber pickles. An old housekeeper has sent me the following, which is excellent: "Make a brine of four gallons of cold water, six quarts of salt, a piece of alum the size of a walnut and one and one-half ounces of saltpeter, stirring till salt is dissolved. This should float an egg; if it will not, add more salt. Put in either small or medium-sized cucumbers and leave them in brine from 14 to 24 hours depending upon how salty you wish the pickles to be. Remove pickles from this brine, let them stand in cold water for 24 hours with grape leaves between layers of the cucumbers. During the last five hours put a large piece of ice upon the pickles to chill and harden them. Boil cider vinegar for several minutes and turn it over the cucumbers which have been drained from the ice water and placed in a crock. Put a piece of clean white paper over all, with a layer of cotton batting on top. Tie more cotton over the top of the jar." Many housekeepers, however, prefer the Three Day Method, which I will describe here: Wipe four quarts of unripe cucumbers, put them into a stone crock, add one cup of salt dissolved in two quarts of boiling water and let stand for three days. Drain the cucumbers from this brine, then put the same brine over the cucumbers and bring it to the boiling point. Pour it over the cucumbers and again let it stand on them for three days. Repeat this process still again (that is, bringing the same brine to the boiling point, pouring it over the cucumbers and letting stand three days), then drain the cucumbers and pour over them one gallon of boiling water in which one tablespoon of powdered alum has been dissolved. Let the pickles stand in the alum water for five or six hours, then drain.

The Editor Hears

That the costumes to be used in the Kingston historical pageant to be put on this month, will be very fine. The costume committee has paid a great deal of attention to detail and succeeded in getting results which will produce a brilliant and exact (in miniature) representation of the principal events in the history of Kingston from the days when it was Catarqui, a clay fort and a fur trading station for the adventurous La Salle.

That the schools opened in a heavy shower and the scholars had a taste of the hardship of attending school on the bad days as a starter.

That when Mrs. Pikret Bey, wife of Turkey's most famous modern poet, arrived to visit her son, an assistant professor at the University, she was greeted with the news that he had married an American girl—and a bobbed-haired girl. "Oh, that is nothing. Your reverend aunt, forty years old, has bobbed hers too," responded the Turkish mother. Mrs. Pikret Bey then explained to the astonished young man that many things had happened since the Nationalist Government came into power in Turkey. "Turkey has become very European in recent years," she said. "The women wear no veils on the street and their costumes are just like those of Parisian women, save for the silk scarf which they wear tight about their heads. Young Turkish women wear décolleté gowns at the Red Crescent Ball, given recently, and they danced all the modern steps."

That various relics of the old days have been offered by people interested in the Kingston historical pageant. These curios will be placed in the windows of some of the principal Kingston shops and will no doubt be of interest to the citizens as well as to the visitors to the city during fair week. Any relics will be gladly received by the committee in charge.

That all the clubs of the "Y" have enjoyed a holiday at U-Auto Camp. This summer home is a delightful spot and the spirit of fellowship inculcated by the Girl's Fellowship Club pervades the atmosphere with the happiest results.

That the Kingston Humane Society has the next tag day when the public will have an opportunity to help those who cannot help themselves.

WEDDINGS.

Dew-Sutherland. The marriage was solemnized at St. Paul's church on Wednesday afternoon of Ethelmay, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Sutherland, Clergy street, and Reginald Dew, Detroit, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dew, Lunenburg, Cornwall, England, Rev. J. Connely Dixon officiating. Miss Walker, the organist of the church, presided at the organ, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Earl McBride sang "At Dawning." The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, wore a smart frock of navy blue French brocade crepe, with a black and gold hat. She was unattended, but Dr. McBride, Woodbridge, Ont., and Miss Phillis Coates signed the register as witnesses.

Among the handsome gowns worn were those of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sutherland, who was in black and white crepe and Mrs. McBride, a sister of the bride, who was frocked in brown canton crepe, heavily headed. Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Sutherland, St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. James Clute, Port Richmond, Staten Island, N.Y., were out-of-town guests. Mr. and Mrs. Dew left on the afternoon boat for Toronto and other western points and will later make their home in Detroit.

Harris-Posselwhite. A pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, Sept. 2nd, in Sydenham street Methodist church, by the Rev. G. A. Sisco, when Letty May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Posselwhite, was united in marriage to Ernest Harris, of Queen's University.
