Customer: "I don't like to trade in a place that contains so many flies." Butcher: "But you see they are attracted by the good food I keep."

Attraction. Ella: "So you punished Charlie by sitting on the opposite side of the table? What was the result?" Stella: "It seemed to have a rather far-reaching effect on him."

Seems That Way. The Professor was in a jovial mood. "I have come to the conclusion," he chuckled, "that 'the most wonderful girl in the world' must be a bigamist—she gets married so often!"

These College Boys! First Collegian: "How's your roommate's fever?" Second Collegian: "Not so hot."

Proud mother, shopping for her son: "I want a pair of gray flannel trousers for an eighteen-year old boy with wide flapping legs."

RADIO "APPLAUSE CAUDS." Station XYZ. Just a line to thank you for the wonderful weather report we heard from your station last evening.

Station WAG. Thanks for your talk on "When to Start the Garden." My wife and I both love to work in it. I have already planted two easy chairs in a shady spot.

Station BILLS. Your talk on how to keep out of debt couldn't be beat. After listening to the hints, I started a family budget.

Station PDQ. The talk you gave last night on how to cook biscuits was very much appreciated. My wife followed the instructions, and baked a pan. One I am using as a weight to keep my radio programmes together, and the rest will come in handy to fire at the birds that like to perch on my aerial.

Tip: "How do you figure that out?" "Well, take her skirts and evening gowns, for instance. Doesn't she make a little go a long way?"

By James W. Barton, M.D.

As you are living in the twentieth century, you think it ridiculous to suggest to you to try and live as did man in the early history of the race.

One of the things he did was to work hard, and then to rest hard or rather well.

I'm not going to discuss the question as to whether you and I work as hard as our ancestors.

He knew how to rest and when to rest, and that was to rest when he needed it. That is such a simple proposition that you may be wondering at just what I'm driving.

In these days of hurry and excitement, the endeavor to get big production, to build a bridge or factory in a matter of so many days, rest, the necessity of rest, is entirely lost sight of.

Well, in some of these factories where production was the goal, certain experiments were tried.

These experiments were meant to increase or "speed up" production. Accordingly about eleven o'clock in the morning a rest of ten minutes was given to all the employees.

In the afternoon at two-thirty, and again at four, ten minute resting periods were given.

Production was increased. The resting of mind and body during these three periods, thirty minutes in all, increased production nearly fifteen per cent. all round.

Where the work was of an individual, or more interesting kind, the production increased about ten per cent., and where the work was mechanical or monotonous, nearly twenty per cent.

My point is that in every kind of work, where it is possible, these short rest periods should be taken.

You will not only do more work, but your body and brain will be the better for it, and your general view of life be more optimistic.
