Mrs. Alfred Smith a former Kingstonian at Welland, and while at Grimsby, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Buck.

WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

Phillipsville. The Woman's Institute at Phillipsville was held on Sept. 12th and took the form of a quilting bee.

Mrs. Isaac Stevens supplying the quilt. A recitation was given by Mrs. Maude Davidson very nicely.

Miss Mrs. T. W. Acheson gave a splendid description of New Ontario which she recently visited.

Her talk of the gold mines and paper and pulp mills which she had the pleasure of seeing was very interesting.

It is surprising how New Ontario has prospered and grown in the last ten years. Refreshments were served at the close, consisting of coffee, cake, sandwiches and salads.

The October meeting is to be a social evening under the directorship of Mrs. Isaac Stevens, and all the members are looking forward to a very pleasant time.

The booth at the Chantry school fair will be looked after by a committee of ladies.

Seek not proud riches, but such as you may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly.

Candidates for office will pitch hay or do almost anything except enter the bathing beauty contests.

Miss Margaret Abbott, New York, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. William Spooner, Glenburnie, for the month of September.

Rev. A. L. Blacklock has returned to his church work at Waltham, Mass., after spending July and August at his home in Glenburnie.

Miss Switzer, Queen street, has returned from Atlantic City.

Miss Olive Bebee, Detroit, Mich., is spending two months at her home in Vernachar with her mother, Mrs. G. M. Bebee.

Miss Lottie Nickle was a guest of the bathing beauty contests.

FAREWELL AND WELCOME.

A Double Event at Princess Street Methodist Church. That the people of Princess street Methodist church know how to honor their workers was again strongly evidenced last evening when a large gathering representing the W.M.S., Sunday school and Q.O.B. met to express its regrets to Miss Mary Gardner's soon leaving for the West, and to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McIlquham not long since married in the west.

Miss Gardner had previously been the recipient of a beautiful travelling bag from the Ladies' Aid of which organization she had been president for a year. The surprise, therefore, of a gold wrist watch, suitably engraved, presented Wednesday evening to her, was indeed real.

The fitting address was read by Miss Emma Wilder, and the presentation by Miss Emma Peters.

At the close of her deeply-felt response to the gift and address, Miss Wilder called forward Mr. and Mrs. McIlquham. Mr. McIlquham had been a faithful Sunday school worker for years and had married a young lady out west, who with him received the warmest greetings from Miss Wilder and the representative group present.

Miss Emma Peters presented to them some pieces of cut glass as an expression of the sincerity of the church's wishes.

After their reply, refreshments were served and the gathering dispersed, after singing the hymn, "Best be the Tie that Binds."

School Days. It's lonesome in the stable yard and where the chickens "peep."

It's dull and stupid 'round the house, the kitten's fast asleep; Old Towser, nain' everywhere and hunting 'round the place.

Comes back to whine and paw my knee and look up in my face; And mother, in the kitchen there, amongst the pans and things, is busy, but I have't heard the song she always sings;

There's somethin' mislin', somethin' wrong that spiles the work and play— And don't I know it! Well, I guess! He's gone to school today.

I try to work and not to think, but tryin' all I can, I stop and wonder why it's still—no drumming on a pan.

No rustlin' in the apple tree, no splashin' by the pump, And no one hid behind the post to "Boo!" and make me jump.

And in the house it's all so prim—no scattered book or block, No laugh or shout, no nothin' but the tickin' of the clock.

I look at Ma and she at me; no need for us to say What ails us both; we know too well —he's gone to school today.

He started out at half past eight, all rigged up in his best, And with the slate beneath his arm, the books and all the rest;

And mother fixed his tie once more, and did her best to smile, And I stood by and praised him up and laughed about his "style."

But, when he marched off down the road and stopped to wave good by, 'Twas kind of choky in my throat and misty in my eye.

Proud of him? Well, I rather guess! And happy, too—but say! It's mighty lonesome 'round the place—he's gone to school today. —JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

The Fairy Slipper. The grown-ups say to me that in our garden The butterflies I see with brown-gold wings, Have never carried, little fairy babies To play beside the queer wee fairy rings.

I'll never show them now the fairy slipper That once beside a fairy ring I found. They'd surely say 'twas just a curled up petal That dropped from our pink rose-bush to the ground.

But I who found it know it was a slipper Worn by a gold-haired, white-winged fairy maid; I guess she lost it when so gaily dancing, She heard a noise and hurried off, afraid.

—Mary Isabel Houston in "Verse and Reverse."

The Ravages of Time. (Date: 1940.) The old couple argued. They couldn't recall. Said one: "It was played with a little white ball"

And I'm certain the name was Mah Pong." The other grew scornful and said: "Not at all."

We played it with chips which we built in a well, And the name of the games was Ping-Jong."

On ironing and cleaning days plan to have your main dish for dinner a baked one so that it may be prepared in a short time and may cook while you are about your work.

Rhinestones, pearls, beads and sequins are used more frequently in narrow bands or in panels than in all-over patterns on the newest evening gowns.

Knitting an Infant's Surplice Sweater. The following knitting directions are for a surplice sweater for a six-months-old baby (or any fairly small baby under a year old).

Materials: One ball of pink two-fold Saxony, one pair of either bone or celluloid knitting needles size four, two pearl buttons.

Terms: K means knit. P means purl. Sts. means stitches. N means narrow (that is, knit two stitches together as one stitch). R means ridge. B. o. l. means bind off loosely.

Begin the sweater by casting on 50 sts. K on, P one for 12 rows. K 2 R (over and back making one ridge).

For sleeves, cast on ten sts. at each end of the row; repeat on next row across, add five on the next row.

The Editor hears. That the Kingston Industrial Exhibition is bigger and better than ever and the Historical Pageant, in which hundreds of citizens take part, is one of the great evening attractions.

The city is looking its prettiest for the exhibition. The parks are still full of flowers, the rich autumn tints and the soft hues of the Michaelmas daisies accentuating the lovely green of the grass, still as fresh as it was in June.

That among the workers and actors in the pageant are many men and women, not natives of Kingston or Frontenac, some of them coming recently from the old land and others from the great republic to the south. They have spared neither time nor energy in helping the citizens to put on a representation of the history of which they are proud, and to them in a very special way is due the thanks of the community.

That the display of woman's work at the fair is remarkably good. It is well worth seeing and is a real attraction. Neatness and good taste are noticeable and the articles would be a delight to any woman who was fortunate enough to possess them.

That as usual the school tent is an attractive place. The children should all see it and no one can really be said to have seen the fair, who has not had a peep into the big tent—and those who peep will be sure to linger among its attractions.

That the sword worn by Capt. Michael Grass when he led his band of United Empire Loyalists to Kingston, loaned by Mr. Robert Grass, Toronto, is worn by Mr. W. H. Herington in the U.E.L. scene in the pageant.

Winnipeg man prefers Kellogg's Bran to Million Dollars

"If," says Mr. J. M. Michols of Winnipeg, "I had to choose between doing without your bran or a million dollars, I would much rather do without the million." Mr. Michols is one hundred per cent right. The wealth of the world could not buy the health that Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, has brought to thousands of Canadians.

There are poppies in my garden. There are poppies in my garden. Banquets of flame; Seeing them, I pause and think me Of a flower that came From the trampled fields of Belgium When the times were ill— "Just to show you I am sticking, Sticking to it still!"

There are roses for their fragrance. But the poppies grow Just to show I'm not forgetting Proudly calm in my regretting, In my sorrow glad. ERNEST H. A. HOME. Belleville husband left home because she bobbed her hair, but this may only serve to increase bobbing in Belleville.
