> U.S. REVOLT AGAINST HIGH TARIFF.

Economics is a dismal science. and economists are not as a rule excessively cheerful persons, but is not often that they have to spend so much time as they are now spending in the effort to explain why things in a given country are much less terrible than they expected them to be. Orthodox economic opinion has been predicting great disturbances as the result of present abnormal accumulation gold in the United States for last four years, and very little of the predicted extravagant soaring prices and the excessive "booming" of business has actually occurred since the great post-war readjustment of 1920. English economists have sought to explain this disappointing behavior of American business on the theory that the Federal Reserve Banks have prevented the imported gold from serving as a basis for either money or credit; they are strongly attached to the quantity theory of money, and if more gold does not produce higher prices they can conceive of only one alternative, namely that more gold has not produced more money. American writers, notably Dr. Benjamin Anderson, the economic expert of the Chase National Bank of New York, are much less convinced that the Reserve System has kept ing enlarged by the increase of gold, who were sent out by Louis XIV of and claim that there really is far France about the same time. And as a matter of fact, the first sign of an industrial boom in the United States is already visible; unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, which for twenty years have followed the commercial money rate with the most impressiv exactitude, have reached what is, in proportion to the present increased capacity of the industry, by far the lowest point in their history, and in actual figures as low as any narterly showing sage one since 504. SPREAD OF KNOWLEDGE.

From every political, economical and moral standpoint it is important to the world that illiteracy 's being reduced by great strides every country of the world and that a day will come when the number of illiterates will be infinitesimal.

It is also amazing that there are half a billion illiterates in India and China, that Africa and Russia each have one hundred million people who can not read or write, that there are fifty million illiterate Latin-Americans and that although the educated in the United States, Canada, England, France and Germany are in the majority, each of these countries has no inconsiderable illiteracy.

On universal education must the world depend for perpetual peace economic stability and plenty, moral rectitude and universal contentment and prosperity. As literacy has spread, the universe has approached nearer to these ideals. The movement for universal literacy has been benefitted greatly by a change the attitude of the monarchial governments of the world toward the educating of the lower classes and by the establishment of representative government in many European and Asiatic countries as a result of the world war. Where once the rul ing powers of Europe and Asia fel that general illiteracy strengthened their authority and so nurtured it they now foster education for all

WHY THE WEATHER?

DR. CHARLES S. BROOKS Secretary, American Meteorological Society, Tells Mew.

Manufactured Climate. Although man has not found it practicable to control weather on a arge scale, in certain small ways he can modify the climate to his liking. With an electric fan in summer, he ncreases the wind velocity indoors; systems of refrigeration lower the temperature of cars or buildings; humidifiers add moisture to the air furnaces create an indoor desert

summer during the winter.

In many industries weather is an important control. Printing and lithographing, for example, are vitally affected by weather changes. Paper or cardboard printed one collor one day may not register properly for another color the next, on account of the change in size and shape of the sheets caused by variation in moisture. Air driers or moisteners in operation night and day are not always sufficient to remedy the situation. Cotton mills prefer a relative humidity of about 75 per cent., as the fibre is not so workable in dry air, and cloth made under varying humidities will shrink irregution" their air and keep the window
