TELLS ABOUT PEACE RIVER MISSION WORK

Dr. Phillips Macdonnell Spent Three Years There as the Hospital Doctor.

Sunday in St. Andrew's church was observed by having Dr. Phillips Macdonnell of Kingston give an address at the morning service on the work of the W.M.S. mission hospital at Fort Vermilion, in the Peace River country, where he spent three years as the hospital doctor. Fort Vermilion is a Hudson Bay post in the centre of several hundred Indians and seven to eight hundred whites, who earn a precarious living in fur trading. The hospital was started in 1921, the year that Dr. Macdonnell went to the district, and when Rev. T. F. McGregor, a burly Scotchman from Pictou, N.S., who is supported largely by the W.M.S., was carrying on a heroic missionary work among the inhabitants. The Canadian Woman's Missionary Society sent two nurses to the hospital. One had to return through illness, but Mrs. Mathan has remained to render valiant service in the face of many hardships. Malls are often two months apart, the temperature goes down to fifty degrees, and the ordinary comforts are few. The W.M.S. has decided to withdraw the nurse this year. Patients have not been many and the expense has been $3,000 a year, which it is thought may be better spent in other fields. A violin solo by Miss Goldie Bartels and a vocal solo by Mr. Hess were much appreciated. In Cooke's church on Sunday morning Mrs. William Jackson, of this city, a member of the executive of the Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S., gave an excellent outline of the work which the W.M.S. is carrying on throughout Canada. In Chalmers church on Sunday morning the objects and efforts of the W.M.S. were ably dealt with by the minister, Rev. George A. Brown.

A Brighton exhibitor was second, Centreville third, and Cooke Bros. of Cataragui fourth. Mr. Baker won first prize for celery at the Kingston fair and his exhibit was certainly of a fine quality.
