WHY THE WEATHER?

DR. CHARLES F. BROOKS
Secretary, American Meteorological Society, Tells How

Record American Downpours.

The heaviest 24-hour rainfall ever recorded by the U.S. Weather Bureau occurred at Taylor, in southeastern Texas, Sept. 9th and 10th, 1921, where 23.11 inches fell in 24 hours. This came during two severe thunderstorms, moving very slowly. The amount of this downpour can be better appreciated if we remember that this is over half the average amount of rainfall at New York or Boston and over two-thirds the average for Chicago for a whole year. In the surrounding country farmers, empty water barrels 26 inches deep were filled to overflowing, though standing in the open. It seems certain that the rainfall there exceeded 30 inches within 15 hours. The countryside for 10 miles south of Taylor was under water the morning of the 10th. Houses were washed away or filled with mud, and 87 people were drowned in Taylor and vicinity. Much the same sort of a rain and flood occurred in Beaumont, Texas, May 18th, 1923, when in 12 hours 13.54 inches of rain fell, practically all of it in 2-1/2 hours a heavy thunderstorm. A rainfall almost equalling that at Taylor, was that of 22.22 inches in 24 hours at Altapass, N.C., July 14th and 15th, 1916, during a West Indian hurricane.

The more northern and western states also have their cloudburst records. At Concord, Pt., Aug. 5th, 1842, 16 inches fell in three hours. At Guinea, Va., Aug. 24th, 1906, over 9 1/4 inches fell in about 30 minutes and over 11 1/4 inches in 45 minutes. At Taborton, N.Y., Aug. 10th, 1920, 8.95 inches fell in about 2 hours, but this appears to have been less of a downpour than one at the same place in Aug. 1891. At Campo, Calif., Aug. 12th, 1891, during a 16.1 inch cloudburst, 11.5 inches fell practically in 30 minutes.

The financial meeting for Picton Methodist District will be held on Sept. 29th, in Picton. Reading without thinking may, indeed, make a rich commonplace, but 'twill never make a clear head.

PANELS OF VELVET.

Chendle crepe, velvet and marabou make this gown what it is. The velvet panels are the unique features and contribute most to the unusual effect. These combinations of materials are seen very generally in the fall collections and they are a boon to the home dressmaker since they offer excellent opportunities for making over frocks. This outfit is carried out in brilliant red.

PROBS:—Local frosts to-night. Wednesday, southerly winds, fair.
