FAMOUS WINNING FOOTBALL PLAYS

Tad Jones, Yale Short End Run. This is Yale's most consistent ground-gaining play. Where the backs are well versed in blocking, the ball should be carried into the secondary defense before the play is stopped. It is a simple formation but very effective. The opposing left tackle is blocked by the end and No. 4 Back. No. 2 and 3 Backs take care of the opposing left end. Right guard No. 5 in the accompaniment of a runner a greater chance to gain pening diagram, leaves his position in the line to lead the interference. The other linemen check their opponents and then go through to block the secondary defense. The ball comes to No. 1 Back on a direct pass. He starts out laterally until about off tackle and then cuts in sharply, his path having been effectively cleared by the interference. No. 5, right guard, should when ever possible block the defensive back from the outside. This gives the group.

Yale is particularly noted for its running interference and past mid-field the short end run becomes a great weapon. As Tad Jones defines it, the short-end runs success depends on the ability of the interference to block the opposition and the skill of the runner to take advantage of the opening. As Coach Jones further explains his favorite play is dependable when ever a short gain is very necessary.

Warren Snyder especially finding it difficult to get away. The winners were the better in the backfield and along the line, but Toronto almost matched their efforts in a determined stand against the smoothly coordinated play of the Tricolor. The victory was earned on merit.

PIGSKIN PRIMER

What are the restrictions on sideline coaching? It is contrary to the rules for any one on the side lines, particularly the coach, to give any instructions through talking, special signals or special positions to a team while on the field. The officials have it in their power to penalize any one who so offends.

What are the end zones on the gridiron? The end zones constitute the territory between the goal line and another line 25 yards back of the goal line.

What is regarded as tripping by the football officials? Tripping is regarded as any obstruction of an opponent below the knee by that part of the leg below the knee.

RUGBY NOTES.

"Baldy" Baldwin played half a senior intercollegiate game at the keystone position with his nervous system disconnected from his thinking. It's a good thing no person gave him the ball and started him running the wrong way.

And we suppose some unkind fans will now dub little Freddy "the Senseless Quarterback" or "the Wandering Wonder" or the "Dreamy Star."

Just the same, we hate to think what would have happened to Varsity had he been just right.

Pete Doland's team won out 9-0 on Saturday. We expect they received a lot of emphatic instructions since he took charge.

Edmonton Eskimos have been eliminated from the running in Western football. Thank heaven we do not have to look at them again this year.

As a mascot King Booboo is one fine life-sized worry. He has now attended three games and has broken loose twice. Not such a bad record for line-plunging.

C. W. McQueen says Queen's had the breaks on Saturday. "Mack" has a funny sort of humor bump but he's not such a bad fellow when you get used to him.

Fortunately Lou Marsh was not among those present in the press box or that 8-3 victory for Queen's would have looked like a 20-0 victory for Varsity.

Thanks to the football clubs for having no game on Saturday next. That just allows the Hussars to play their final home game of baseball.

TO-MORROW

Tomorrow afternoon those fans who can get away for it will see a mighty good rugby battle at the George Richardson Stadium when Queen's thirds meet R.M.C. seconds in the second junior intercollegiate game. The Tricolor won the first battle fifteen to five and are ten points to the good but the Red and white always make it more interesting in the second trial. It should be better football and a closer score than last game.

They seldom come back. This fact was vividly brought home to the minds of boxing fans not long ago when Willie Ritchie, former lightweight king, was beaten in four rounds by Joe Simonich, a Butte welterweight, at Oakland, California. A dozen or so years ago a boxer like Simonich wouldn't have lasted half a round with Willie, for at that time Ritchie was a fairly clever boxer, a terrific puncher and a grand shock absorber.

An English woman boxing fan described Tommy Gibbons as "a slightly-damaged version of our old friend Apollo," when Tommy was in London recently for his fight with Jack Bloomfield. Slightly-damaged? Yes, slightly! Gibbons is a pleasant, cheerful chap, out of the ring, but anyone could spot him for a pug by his bashed-in nose, cauliflower ear and tanned skin.

Never since the days of Tommy Burns has Canada had so promising a heavyweight as Jack Rensult. In his recent battles with Bartley Madden and Homer Smith the big Canadian showed superlative form, and while he is not ready for Dempsey yet, we are now able to say, "Watch out, Willie!" without being given the well known haw-haw.

American fight fans are getting sick of watching "Battling" Siki lose miserably to fourth-rate boxers. Siki (in reality Lew Phal) has been getting big purses for what should be good fights, but the Sengalese has neither the ability or the fighting spirit to put up a good battle, and the shows are usually fiascos. The negro is able to secure matches because of his "win" over Carpentier in Paris two years ago, which makes him a good box-office attraction. Yet why should this be so? Since his fight with Carpentier, Siki has lost to Morelle in Paris, McTigue in Dublin, Homer Smith and others in America, while recently he quit cold to Mike Conroy in eight rounds at Lorain, Ohio.

Hornaby Sets New Record. Rogers Hornaby, in batting well over .400 for 1924, again leads the National League and sets a new record of topping that organization for five successive years. He is the most consistent batsman in the majors.

Moore Helps Pirates. Moore, who was used in the outfield during the fag end of the season because of his hitting, came to the Pittsburg club as an infielder. Earlier in the campaign he did great work in place of Traynor at third.
