That even the children have learned due respect for church sales for a little Kingston boy looking with longing eyes at a plate of delicious looking cakes and wishing for one hesitated and said wistfully to his mother, "Are they for the church mummies?"

That a Paris note says: "Whether the head beneath the new sports hats is wooden or not, the colors employed at least bear woodland names. The simplest, smartest and newest of these creations are of felt with a narrow brim in front which can be turned down or up, adorned with a simple ribbon band and colored in tints known as oak, chestnut, cinnamon and ash."

That the crase for jazz is responsible for the small houses when real music is advertised. Jazz is commercialized music. No one composed it because he or she wishes to express in the way God gave them power to, the thoughts of their soul. At least we sincerely hope not. The jazz of to-day is arranged, discarded and all, from the savage music played by a sensual race of negroes for devil dances and revolting orgies.

It is done by people who have generally a very superficial knowledge of the theory of music, purely for gain. As long as there is a demand for this kind of thing there will be a supply. But is surely a matter for regret that the average young person, is not acquiring a taste for music on a higher plain than that enjoyed by the lowest savage.

That so-called camel's hair paint brushes are not so named because they are made from hairs out of the camel's skin. They are made from squirrel's fur and first made by a man named Camel, whose identity has been completely lost for many years.

AUNT HET

"It looks like ever' time we have swell company Pa stoops over and exposes his patch."

The Family Market Basket

Fresh lettuce at two big bunches for 15c was to be had on the Kingston market of Saturday and all the winter vegetables were selling at reasonable rates. Beef made its appearance, selling at 10 and 8c a pound by the quarter and veal was 17 and 15c. Fresh herrings were selling at 5c a piece.

On the island market was a splendid exhibition of china painting done by Miss Valetta Leslie, Godfrey. Exquisite coloring and dainty designs in flowers and some very handsome lustre painting; cups and saucers were selling at most reasonable rates.

FARMER WAS CAUGHT SELLING BAD EGGS

The Inspector Made Him Refund the Money to a Local Merchant.

Eggs that are sold on the Kingston market must be up to standard which has been adopted by the Dominion Government. On Saturday morning a Dominion government egg inspector made an examination of the eggs which were offered for sale.

Her First Party.

Helen was at her first party. When the refreshments were served, says Everybody's, she refused a second helping of ice cream with a polite, "No, thank you," though she looked wistful.

A Memorial to Kitchener's War Dead is Likely to be Erected in Front of the New City Hall.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday at the Methodist parsonage, Addison, when Rev. D. D. Elliott united in marriage Miss Beattie B. Flood, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Flood, New Dublin, to J. Donald Walker, youngest son of Mr. T. A. Walker, of the same place.

Crossing the Housekeeping Bridges. After much observation I have come to the conclusion that the houseworker does more worrying than the office worker. I have been contrasting my business-women friends with my house-keeping friends and find that the latter are the more inclined to "cross bridges" which often never materialize.

Now I do not mean that I think housework unhealthful. On the other hand, I believe it is the best and most normal kind of work for a woman. There is a deep-rooted domesticity in every one of us which finds expression and satisfaction in housework.
