RINKS IN KINGSTON

The Engineering Institute at Queen's Hears About the Various Structures.

The history of skating rinks in Kingston was covered at the meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada held in Carruthers Hall Thursday evening.

The covered rink was erected by private enterprise in 1893 and was unprofitable because an opposition rink was at once opened across the road in an old drill shed where the mechanical laboratories now stand.

In 1922, the covered rink burned down shortly after being acquired by the university. When the city was canvassed for funds with which to erect a new structure the Hart family most generously subscribed in memory of Dr. "Jock" Hart, one of Kingston's outstanding sportsmen, and for many years honorary coach of the university hockey team.

For the building now reaching completion competitive designs and tenders were called for directly from the contracting firms, a most unusual procedure as no architect was employed.

Mr. Grant MacLachlan, one of the contractors and engineer in charge of construction then spoke briefly of the design and contracting, after which Prof. L. M. Arley described the refrigerating plant.

The weak feature about so many scientific books on farming is that they advocate methods and equipment quite beyond the means of the average farmer. This booklet does not fall into that error. The question of help, and also that of initial expense, has evidently been kept constantly in mind, with the result that the farmer is shown how to increase the average production of any given number of hens without going into experiments that are costly either in time or money, or both.

The main point to be borne in mind is, of course, the question of profit. It is shown that on some farms the net profit on poultry-keeping is relatively large, on others it is small, and on still others the poultry prove an actual loss. These differences are almost wholly due to the methods followed. Certain breeds are, of course, more profitable than others. But then there are differences in housing, in feeding, in oversight, in culling, in the prevention of disease and in many other particulars to be considered.

All these matters, and the scientific principles underlying them, are plainly described in this booklet, and with this advantage, that each point, as it comes up, is illustrated by reproductions of actual photographs. By pictures, as well as by words, the reader is shown what is right and what is wrong, what is good practice and what is bad practice, in poultry-keeping.

Credit is due to the Bank of Montreal, from whom our readers may obtain free copies of the booklet, for making such a valuable exposition of poultry-keeping available to the public. We believe that this booklet will be the means of increasing the interest in poultry-keeping, and of increasing also the income on many farms.

The booklet in question was originally prepared for distribution in the United States by the Agricultural Department of the International Harvester Company, and it is considered of so valuable a character that the Bank of Montreal has made arrangements for the printing of a special Canadian edition for free distribution. The special value of this booklet is that it is not an individual treatise on poultry-keeping, but a description in plain language of the most successful methods of poultry-keeping adopted by investigators on the leading Experimental Farms of the continent, among which, we are glad to note, is

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving memory of our darling, Leslie M. Gwynne, wife of E. C. Haflerty, who died December 5th, 1921.

Three years ago we laid her low. In the grave she lies and cold. But I know that in heaven she is waiting for me.

In loving memory of our daughter, Agnes Ely, who went home December 5th, 1922.

"'Tis hard to break the tender cord. When love has bound the heart. 'Tis hard so hard to speak the words. Must we forever part?"

Dearest, loved one, we have laid thee, In the peaceful grave's embrace. But thy memory will be cherished. 'Till we see thy heavenly face.
