HON. CHARLES M'CREA SPEAKS AT QUEEN'S

Addresses Science Students on "Northern Ontario," Which Is Full of Promise.

On Friday Queen's entertained a member of the Ontario cabinet, the Hon. Charles M'Creia, Minister of Mines. He reached the city on the noon train and in the afternoon he addressed the science students and members of the staff in Convocation Hall.

"Northern Ontario," where he has spent twenty-two years of his life, and in which he is keenly interested as minister of Mines, was the subject of his remarks. He convinced his interested audience that it is a very important part of this province and that it is full of great promise of future development.

Not so long ago Northern Ontario was thought of as a region of stunted poplar, a hopeless area that must be crossed to get from the east to the west, the point at which the Dominion would break in two. Geologists called its land formation Pre-Cambrian, the oldest kind in the world.

Then came the discovery of its nickel mines when the C.P.R. was being built. Now Ontario dominates the world's nickel market. Then came the finding of silver at Cobalt, also in connection with the building of a railroad. The contribution of that region is 230 million dollars. Next came gold, the development of which has been most rapid. In 1911 the gold production there was $50,000. In 1924 it will be 25 millions. Timmins has doubled its population in the last three years. It now has 16,000 inhabitants with all the conveniences of a large city, even to golf-links. The Hollinger mine is one of the biggest in the world. It turns out a million dollars worth of gold a month and next year may make it two million. The McIntyre and Dome mines were also valuable and promising.

But such a region needed capital to develop its resources. The Ontario Government is anxious to do this and last summer Mr. M'Creia spent five weeks in England seeking to interest capitalists there. They wanted to know what was Ontario's attitude towards capital as regards taxation and legislation. The speaker claimed the Government was very friendly and that the laws of Ontario as regards mining were considered among the best by financiers.

Why should Northern Ontario not have twenty Timmins? There were many other metals at present going to waste. The development of mining was developing the clay belt of the region. In fact, these millions that were being dug out of the earth were helping every trade. It increased business and enlarged nearly every kind of market. It might even benefit Kingston, for Mr. Harty had accompanied Mr. M'Creia recently to Northern Ontario to determine if the Canadian Locomotive Works could not manufacture mining machinery. At present in Northern Ontario there were 3,500 miles of railway. At the same time that this progress was being made Ontario's field crops were dropping in value over seventy millions between 1919 and 1923 (though this year expected an increase of 30 millions) as the result of world conditions fixing prices. The fiscal policy and the attitude of the Provincial Government were other factors affecting the country's prosperity. Mr. M'Creia claimed the latter was one of encouragement.

Northern Ontario offered a wonderful opportunity for skilled and trained men of courage. He praised Queen's School of Mining very highly, not only for its pioneer work but for the excellent training given its students. Queen's science graduates occupied leading positions in the district of which he spoke.

Principal Taylor, who presided, Dean Clark and Prof. McKay commended on the address.
