A COLD WEEK-END; TEN BELOW ZERO

The Temperature Rose Sunday Evening, Accompanied by Light Snowfall.

It felt as if the bottom had dropped out of the thermometer over the week-end. By the time the man of the house finished his Sunday morning 'nooze there was a temperature of ten degrees below zero to battle against and many were the qualms over the quantity of coal that the furnace was demanding. Caretakers of churches had to be particularly prodigal, and even then a number of churches were none too comfortable. The congregations were fairly large despite the cold. By evening the mercury had crawled up to six above zero. There was a curious display of northern lights just before the snow began to fall, a dozen or so sharply defined vertical beams that looked very like searchlights. Ice took on the harbor.

The C.P.R. officials state that at Shearbot Lake and Tichborne the temperature on Sunday was eighteen below zero. Monday morning the local temperature was thirteen above zero.
