WHEAT EXPORT DUTY Is Discussed in Report of Canadian Commission. Ottawa, Feb. 9.—Export duty on Canadian wheat entering the United States is discussed in the report of the royal commission which last year investigated the Canadian grain trade, and the report says that "while as a general thing export duties are to be deprecated, the exceptional situation that arises in this instance might warrant such an impost."

2 Years' Backache Subdued by "Nerviline" "Backache was the bane of my life, and for two years I was so lame as to be unfit for work," writes E. S. Sloane, from Georgetown. "While in Smith Bros. Drug Store, I heard of Nerviline being a wonderful pain-destroyer, so I decided to try Nerviline. Thanks to Nerviline, my two years' backache was rubbed away, and to-day I am perfectly well."

LETTERS To The Editor

Snaring Foxes. Bollingbrooke, Feb. 6.—(To the Editor): I would like to ask permission to write a few lines in your paper concerning snaring foxes. I think it is a curse just as bad as poison. They not only catch foxes and dogs, but rabbits by the hundreds, which are left in the swamp to rot, also as inducement for dogs. These rabbits, some say, are good to eat. If so, that is violating the law, as no animal suitable for food shall be let go to waste.

Mr. Shaw says in his letter that some parties have united their efforts in the form of a petition to stop him from catching fox, etc., which is not true. It is true that there has been a petition signed but it is not meant for any special individual, and is for no other purpose than to prohibit snares. Mr. Shaw also says that most of the people who signed the petition are men who hunt without license and on the Lord's Day, which is not true. I don't believe there are three who hunt at all. They are just farmers who don't believe it is right to snare. Anyone reading Mr. Shaw's letter would think he never violated the law.

The last deer I killed Mr. Shaw got half, and it was killed in open season without license. Mr. Shaw says that the country for miles around is frequented by deer. In all my fox hunting I have never seen a deer track. He says he never sets traps and snares without asking permission, which is not true, as he has had traps and snares set on my place and he did not ask permission. I also know where he has snares set on private property and he never asked permission. I am a farmer and a great lover of good dogs and also like to hunt a little in spare time. Who has a better right to a little sport than the farmer who has to work twelve months in the year, but if this snaring is carried on we will have to stop, as one can't run after his dog and watch him all the time when he is hunting. Mr. Shaw says he has caught a few dogs and thinks if he loses a fox or two that is punishment enough. That is poor pay for the owner whose dog is worth maybe $50. The readers may judge between he and me. The Lord will judge later.

Be on your guard for signs of Pyorrhea. Just as the stability of a building is dependent upon its foundations, so healthy teeth depend upon healthy gums. Bleeding gums are the first sign of Pyorrhea's approach. Then they begin to recede and the healthy pink color gives place to a pale, whitish tint. Soon the teeth are loosened, pus pockets form and drain disease-breeding poisons through the system.

Forhan's FOR THE GUMS. More than a tooth paste—it checks Pyorrhea. Forhan's For the Gums contains just the right proportion of Forhan's Astringent (as used by the dental profession) to neutralize oral poisons, and keep the gums in a firm, strong, healthy condition.
