The Mysterious Disappearance Last December Of the Lovely Daughter of Rich Welsh Peer

The Hon. Gwyneth Morgan.

London, Feb. 20.—A door banging on a windy night! Footfalls down a lonely road and, then—silence!

Thus did darkness and mystery swallow the Hon. Gwyneth Erica Morgan, lovely daughter of the richest of Welsh peers, while British society wondered and thrilled.

It is a perfect Sherlock Holmes setting:

A quiet place in Wimbledon, a sort of ruralized community in greater London. Here, the once socially gay Miss Morgan had gone to rest following an attack of typhoid fever. With her went a retinue of servants and a nurse companion.

Such was her social and economic standing that she could have satisfied any whim. For her father is the third Baron Tredegar, owner of 40,000 acres of Welsh coal land, with a great house in London and a magnificent estate near Newport, Wales.

A robust outdoorsman, fond of the fox hunt and of shooting in general, is Baron Tredegar, but his two children have different tastes. Thus Evan Morgan, the son, after a fine war record and a short nibble at politics, set himself to writing verse and to painting.

Gwyneth, on the other hand, was fond of travel and spent much of her time going about the continent. They kept separate establishments in London.

Then the country place in Wimbledon, the slamming door—and mystery!

It was on Dec. 15th that, with $400 upon her person, she fled from the quiet retreat. Two days later the police were told. A month later, or more, the press was informed. Scotland Yard has been on the job. Famous private agencies have been consulted.

All to no avail.

One of the most perplexing mysteries of high social life remains unsolved.

Railway and steamship lines have afforded no clue.

At present the theory is that she will be found in some tiny Welsh village, probably a seacoast hamlet, for she loved the simple life and customs of the seafaring folk and had been known to travel far to attend their dances and song feasts.

No Smoking at Queen's.

Queen's Journal: The "No Smoking" rule will be rigorously enforced henceforth, in all university buildings. The whole matter has been placed by the senate in the hands of the A.M.S., who are determined to safeguard university property by every possible means. Placards of warning have been posted in all the buildings, and the election of Pee-wee Chanler to the office of fire chief in the final precaution against infringements of the regulation. Students should require no coercive penalties to remind them of the fact that smoking, especially at social evenings, is a dangerous practice and loyal consideration for their Alma Mater should be sufficient cause for abstinence.

Elected to Council.

Elmer Davis has been chosen a member of the Executive Council of the Ontario Prohibition Union. So have C. A. Wiseman, Napanee, and W. T. Rogers, Brockville.

At New York, a campaign is on to raise $500,000 to erect at Washington a national navy and marine memorial to Americans lost at sea.

At Peterboro, Fire Chief George Gimblett was refused the triple combination pumper which he has been urging as a necessity for three years.

Do not buy vegetables or fruits of poor quality. The waste amounts to more than the saving in the first cost.

Always keep a pot of beef extract on hand to use for soup on quick notice of to make gravy or meat sauce richer.
